22 Residents File Nomination Papers For Fall Municipal Election

Preliminary Elections Seen For School Committee, Ward 2 Councillor; Current County Treasurer Bellotti Files For Councillor At-Large Seat

By SCOTT JACKSON

At least 17 candidates have qualified for the ballot in the fall municipal election after collecting the required number of signatures ahead of the Tuesday evening deadline to do so, setting up a preliminary race for School Committee in September.

Five other residents returned nomination papers ahead of the cut off and were awaiting certification, including a well-known candidate making a last minute entry into the race for city councillor at-large.

Would-be candidates had until 5 p.m. on Tuesday to return nomination papers signed by at least 50 registered voters. Those seeking to run for one of the six ward seats on the City Council must collect all those signatures from voters within that ward.

Seven candidates for School Committee had their signatures certified as of Tuesday evening, which means a preliminary election will take place Sept. 14 to whittle the field of candidates down to six, barring any withdrawals.

MA Could Legalize Sports Betting

Massachusetts residents may soon have the chance to legally bet on professional and college sports without leaving the state.

More than two dozen states have legalized sports betting since 2018, when the Supreme Court struck down a law that prohibited sports betting in all but a handful of states. New Hampshire, New York and Rhode Island are among the states where gambling on sports is legal and Connecticut will allow sports betting as soon as September.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives on July 22 voted 156-3 in favor of a bill that would legalize sports betting in the Bay State; all four members who represent Quincy voted to pass it. The House bill would allow adults 21 and older to bet on sports at casinos and racetracks and online. Betting on high school

JQA Remembered On 254th Birthday Anniversary

By TOM GORMAN

The legacy of President John Quincy Adams was celebrated in honor of his 254th birthday anniversary during a ceremony at the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center July 12, the day after his actual birthday.

Local officials and a color guard from the Quincy Naval Operational Support Center gathered in the sanctuary to remember the nation's sixth president, son of the second president of the U.S., John Adams, and First Lady Abigail Adams. Both presidents were born in Quincy (at the time part of the Town of Braintree) and are entombed beside their wives in the church's crypt.

The ceremony was originally scheduled for June 9, but Tropical Storm Elsa forced officials to postpone it until the following Monday.

"John Quincy Adams is remembered for many reasons, almost always for his eloquence," United First Parish Church President Jim Petosa told the gathering. He recalled the president's words, "If your actions inspire others to dream more, learn more, do more, become more, you are a leader."

John Quincy Adams served as president from 1825 to 1829. After graduating from Harvard University, he became a lawyer. At age 26, he was appointed Minister to The Netherlands, promoted to the Berlin Legation, and elected to the U.S. Senate in 1802. He was later appointed as Minister to Russia and served as Secretary of State. After his failed reelection as president, he returned to Massachusetts and was elected to the House of Representatives — the first and only former president to serve in the House.

As Secretary of State, he worked with President Monroe formulating the Monroe Doctrine — a warning to foreign countries that the United States would not allow them to interfere with independent governments in the Americas. He also negotiated the purchase of

While serving as a Massachusetts senator, he threw his support for the Louisiana Purchase, a stretch of land between the Rocky Mountains and the Mississippi River. The land acquisitions were part of his vision of a continental United States.

Mayor Thomas Koch said that John Quincy Adams was a "complicated figure...who drew huge crowds wherever he went." Koch noted how Adams served as a diplomat, ambassador, a congressman, a senator, and ultimately, president.

"He was a very complex individual, and widely noted as having one of the highest IQs of any of the presidents," said Koch. "He was an incredible individual, a great American, a great patriot."

The mayor added that

Lawmakers Extend Early, Mail-In Voting

Through Dec. 15

By SCOTT JACKSON

Lawmakers on Beacon Hill have approved extending voting rules first put in place last year amid the pandemic through Dec. 15, meaning Quincy voters will be able to vote early or by mail in the upcoming municipal election.

During a recent interview, Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy) told The Sun his chamber would begin to take a more comprehensive look at voting reform legislation during the fall.

"This is extending what has been in place for the last year or so with the idea that it will be extended so it is in place for the elections this upcoming fall," he said of election legislation that was included in a supplemental budget bill.

"Through the fall, the Senate in particular will have a pretty robust discussion with public input as to what a final elections bill will look like."

The supplemental budget bill was approved unanimously by the Senate and on a voice vote in the House, meaning the legislature would have enough votes to override a veto by Gov. Charlie Baker.

"It passed today in the Senate unanimously. It passed without even a roll call in the House," Keenan said.

"I think there is strong support in both the House and Senate for making voting options available to people and I think that will show itself in a final bill. What that final bill looks like, I'm not sure, but there is a general consensus that we will have an election reform bill probably in the fall."

Keenan said he supported the provisions included in the supplemental budget bill because mail-in and early voting worked well in his district last year.

"I voted in favor of it. It was included in the supplemental budget bill. When I voted on the initial bill in the Senate, I knew it was in there and I supported the provisions. It came out of the conference committee

Adams Academy

Parking Lot Not Impacted By Dimmock Street Repaving

The City of Quincy has informed the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St., that Dimmock Street will undergo streetwork and repaving during the week of July 26 to July 30.

"Although entering and exiting the Adams Academy lot may be more complicated than usual, our understanding, as indicated by the City, is that the Adams Academy parking lot will be accessible most of the time," according to an email sent by the Historical Society. "The one notable exception will be the day when the new asphalt street topping is applied. At that time, we understand, the street will be completely closed for several hours. To our best information, that day and time has not been set," the email added.

Municipal Broadband Work A Year Away

over the line," he added. Cain first proposed the idea of creating a municipal broadband network in 2018, when he introduced a resolution asking city officials to study the concept. One year later, Cain and Mayor Thomas Koch, announced that the city would be working with EntryPoint Networks to study the concept. During the recent interview, Cain said the city released a request for proposals to find a firm to design the new fiber optic system. The city received five submissions back, Cain said, and city officials were reviewing those bids.

The city, Cain added, must also establish a municipal light plant as part of the project, which he described as the "legal process that will hold the operations of the group that manages the infrastructure."

Comcast is currently the only provider of broadband internet in Quincy. Verizon offers DSL service, which is an older technology, but not its high-speed Fios network.

The town of Braintree offers its own internet service through BELD. Under the model the city of Quincy is following, the city would not act as an internet service provider, or ISP, once the new fiber-optic network is installed. Rather, the city will open up the infrastructure to other ISPs, allowing participating residents and businesses the chance to pick and choose who they get internet service from.

"The city of Quincy will not offer internet. It will open that infrastructure line to internet service providers so it can create competition and it will drive the service quality up and drive the price down. Ideally you could use the infrastructure Comcast has here, but they own it, so they are not going to allow competition to play on it," Cain said.

"Fiber is dynamic, broadband is dynamic, so you can have many parties actually playing on that same line. You could have eight to ten - you could have many different competitors on there. "This sort of open access layer we're trying to put on top of the network allows for you as a consumer to choose which internet service provider you'd like to use and you pay for it like a utility."

The plan Quincy is pursuing is based on a model first used in Ammon, Idaho, which EntryPoint Networks helped develop. Ammon's fiber-optic network was hailed by Fast Company, a business magazine, as the best fiber-optic network in the nation in 2019.

"We're not inventing this. The model that we templated...is out of Ammon, Idaho," Cain said. "It is a cool system. They were one of the first to adopt this dynamic open access, municipally owned internet line that allowed for competition."

"There are many cities and towns across the country that are exploring a similar model, including Milton. Weymouth jumped on after we started looking at it."

Cain said he participated in a call with other municipal officials around the country who are looking at developing broadband networks.

"I had the opportunity to participate in a call with a number of cities and towns with a group within the White House who were looking at how to apply federal funds for broadband development in cities and towns," he said.

"Quincy is kind of in a luxurious position where we can afford to develop a system like this whether or not for the [American Rescue Plan Act] funds, but cities and towns and counties like Los Angeles County, places in Michigan, places in rural Wisconsin that either can't afford it themselves, have people that are dramatically at loss because they don't have connectivity - they are not connected to the internet, don't have access to it, they don't have the infrastructure even built to access it - they need that money so they can get their people connected so they can participate in the digital economy."

"I just learned there are so many folks out there across the country, in cities and in rural areas...that need to use those federal funds in order to get this done. There was a particular policy that was issued by the Treasury that wasn't allowing for monies to be used for broadband development so we were advocating for that to be changed so we could have that option."

As part of the plan to develop a fiber-optic network in Quincy, EntryPoint Networks and the city surveyed residents last year to gauge their interest.

Jeff Christiansen of EntryPoint Networks told city councillors in December that 10,000 residents responded to the survey, 80 percent of whom said they were interested in participating in the municipal broadband program.

That same survey showed residents currently pay $90 a month for internet service on average, Christiansen said. If Quincy were to create a municipal broadband network, he said the cost for basic internet service could be in the range of $48 to $55.

It would cost about $75 million to create the municipal broadband network in the city, Christiansen said at the time, but that number is subject to variables like how many people participate and how much of the fiber-optic network is buried underground compared to how much of it is placed on utility poles.

Those who switch to the network would be responsible for paying the upfront cost for the installation of the new equipment. Once that initial cost is paid off in 20 years, Christiansen said subscribers' internet bills would drop to about $30 a month - $20 of which would go to the maintenance of the infrastructure and $10 of which would go to the internet service provider the customer had chosen.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard view of what was known as Chapel Rocks in Squantum Park. Virtually unchanged today, this spot is pretty much the same as when first seen by Myles Standish in 1621. This is one of the few sections of "New England's rocky coast" among Quincy's 27 miles of coastline. Geologists around the world know of the rock formations exposed here. There are different layers of sedimentary rocks from millions of years ago that are considered by experts to be very rare. Boston area college professors have brought hundreds of geology students here from the colleges and universities to observe them.

A Request For More Green Space In Quincy

Quincy has a lot of green spaces, but the question remains does it have enough green space?

Quincy maintains 52 municipal parks and a lot of open space areas.

Eleven of the city's parks are passive meaning they do not have recreational facilities.

According to the U.S. National Forest Service, "greenspace is important because it has been proven to be a health benefit. According to the forest service, exposure to forests strengthens our immune system, reduces blood pressure, increases energy, boosts our mood and helps us regain and maintain our focus in ways that treeless environments just don't."

More specifically, from the U.S. National Forest Service, "Phytoncides improve the human immune system by increasing natural killer cell activity. These cells respond rapidly to virus-infected cells and tumor formation. Studies show that increased natural cell activity can last for more than 30 days after a trip to a forest, suggesting that a trip once a month would enable individuals to maintain a higher level of natural killer cell activity. Other benefits from phytoncides include an increase in anti-cancer proteins; a reduction in blood pressure, heart rate and stress hormones; reduced test scores for anxiety, depression, anger, fatigue, and confusion; and increased scores for vigor" more funds to park/forestry to make the city have more green spaces. The health benefits to such spaces are undeniable.

Quincy should divert

The Quincy Park Department does an exceptional job at maintaining the parks for everyone to use. In addition to making sure the parks are kept up, there is a forestry warden who maintains the forestry in the green spaces. The warden's name is Chris Hayward. He has a varied background and is a Massachusetts certified arborist. Quincy's trees are in good hands with Chris and his team.

Greenspace should define a city and Quincy does a good job with the space it has. What would be nice is a big park, proportional to the size of The Boston Common that people can walk and play and enjoy the scenery. It would also be beneficial to have an arboretum. The Arnold Arboretum is a beautiful landscape dotted with trees of all different types. Quincy could definitely benefit from having an arboretum where residents could walk around and enjoy the various trees along the path.

According to yelp.com, top parks in Quincy included Merrymount Park, Quincy Quarries and Adams National Historical Park.

An example of Quincy adding greenspace was presented in an article written by Scott Jackson where he cited that 1461 and 1463 Hancock Street will be destroyed to make room for some green space. These are the kind of projects the city needs more of.

Another example, pro-sity in Hempstead, N.Y. They are: Jessamine Bearchell and Jaiden Dwyer.

vided in a Scott Jackson article, would be the effort to connect Pine Island to the rest of Merrymount Park. This would provide easy access to more enjoyable green space.

Then there is the fun that more greenspace could bring. People would have more space to play sports like frisbee and soccer amongst others.

The citizens of Quincy would greatly benefit from adding more accessible greenspace to its already varied park program whether it be for health or recreation.

Contract Signed For Vo-Tech High School

Mayor Ameilo Della Chiesa signed a contract with Caudill, Rowlett and Scott for design of the city's new $5 million vocational-technical high school.

The signing marked the formal start of the project approved by the City Council last month. Other signers were John M. Rowlett, a partner in the firm, and Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert.

The contract includes a provision that the school must not cost more than the $5 million already authorized for the project.

CITY INCINERATOR ACTION BLOCKED

More than 500 Quarry Street area residents were granted a preliminary injunction blocking the city from proceeding with plans for a municipal incinerator at Hardwick's Quarry.

Atty. Harry Pavan said that he had filed a bill in equity at Norfolk Probate Court and received the restraining order.

The order blocks the city from taking any action towards building an incinerator in the Quarry Street area.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

The Boston Red Sox left Boston for a 22-day road trip during which the club was scheduled to play 19 games. Sox Manager Johnny Pesky said he hoped the team would "hold its own" during the lengthy trip. The Red Sox left for the road after sweeping a three game series with the Cleveland Indians. The Sox were in fifth place in the 10-team American League with a 50-51 record, 12 1/2 games behind the league-leading New York Yankees.

MPL Events For Adults, Families In August

By Jean Hlady
Milton Public Library

In August, the Milton Public Library is offering some very enjoyable events for adults and families.

On Tuesday, Aug. 3, starting at 6:30 p.m., two dieticians from Beth Israel Hospital Milton will share three recipes via Zoom – for breakfast, lunch and dinner – which will utilize fresh seasonal summer produce and also be quick, and of course healthy. The presenters for this “Virtual Cooking Demo with Staff from Beth Israel” are Elena Almeida, Clinical Nutrition Manager, and Gabrielle Mele, Inpatient and Outpatient Dietician. Check out the presentation summary at www.miltonlibrary.org, then click on “events” from the main page, and then on Aug. 3rd to view it and to register in advance.

This program is part of “Milton Moves” which is a year-long initiative to promote wellness, fitness and healthy eating.

On Tuesday, Aug. 10, from 6:30 to 8 p.m., there will be the second half of Nick DePasquale’s photography workshop via Zoom called: “Seeing Like a Photographer.” We held the first half in July but you do not need to have attended that in order to participate in this talk.

In this virtual talk, you will learn about how to use the elements of visual design and composition to create beautiful pictures. DePasquale is a professional photographer and instructor who teaches classes, conducts workshops and photo walks, tutors beginner to advanced photographers, and exhibits his work from his travels around the world. He has worked for newspapers, magazines, and as a wedding and sports photographer. Please join us by signing up in advance at the Milton Public Library website as registration is now open.

“Friday Afternoon at the Forbes” is an opportunity to enjoy outdoor activities and games in person as part of our “Milton Moves” initiative. It’s happening for all ages on Friday, Aug. 13, from 2 to 5 p.m., on the Forbes House lawn as it is offered in partnership with the Forbes House Museum.

“Battledore and shuttlecock” was a game similar to badminton played during the 19th century, and badminton itself traces its roots back some 2,000 years to ancient China. Croquet was another outdoor lawn game that was very popular in the late 1800s.

Game equipment will be available to use for free in 20-minute intervals and while you’re waiting to play, listen to stories with an MPL librarian, learn more about the museum, explore its beautiful grounds, and enjoy refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the MPL. Advance registration is required at the Milton Public Library website and opens on July 30th.

Everyone’s favorite topic – Armchair Travel – is back on Tuesday, Aug. 17, at 7 p.m. via Zoom with a nature program called: “The Netherlands – Land of Wind, Water and Wildlife.” The presenter will be popular naturalist and photographer Joy Marzolf, formerly of Broadmoor Wildlife Sanctuary.

To most people, windmills are the iconic symbol of The Netherlands and for many centuries the Dutch have controlled the flow of water with dikes and windmills in order to reclaim the land from the sea, and in later years have added vast storm barriers to protect their population. From year-round and migratory birds to mammals, butterflies and flowers, signs of nature can be found in surprising abundance across the grasslands, forests, wetlands and seashores of the country.

Join us for a tour of the history and amazing wildlife of The Netherlands by signing up in advance for this enjoyable photographic talk at the Milton Public Library website.

And finally on Wednesday, Aug. 25, from 6:30 to 8 p.m.,

MILTON PUBLIC LIBRARY announces on Aug. 10, from 6:30 to 8 p.m., there will be the second half of Nick DePasquale’s photography workshop via Zoom called: “Seeing Like a Photographer.” Here he is shown with his wife.

NATURALIST AND PHOTOGRAPHER Joy Marzolf will present the program “The Netherlands – Land of Wind, Water and Wildlife” – as part of the August events by the Milton Public Library. Photos Courtesy Milton Public Library there will be another in person meeting of “The Cookbook Club” with Connie Spiros and Sara Truog held in the Keys Community Room (lower level) of the Library. Each club meeting will feature a selected cookbook, and members will prepare a tasty treat from the book to bring to the program to share.

You do not need to register in advance at the Milton Public Library website for this get together, and our events list at the MPL website give you all the details you need to participate. The cookbook chosen for August is “Milk Street:

Cookish” by Christopher Kimball. If you would like to reserve a copy of the book, you may call the Reference Dept. at (617) 898-4964 and we will place a hold for you. Bon Appetit!

All of these programs are kindly supported by the Friends of the Milton Public Library and are free and open to the public. Go to www.miltonlibrary.org to sign up, and for questions, email jhlady@ocln.org or call (617) 898-4964. We hope you might join us in a cool library program during the month of August!

Movie Review: ‘Space Jam: A New Legacy’

By BOB GARVER

Watching “Space Jam: A New Legacy,” a question kept nagging me: Was “Space Jam” from 1996 this annoying? Both movies starred a professional basketball player who couldn’t act, both movies found a convoluted way to pair them up with the classic Looney Tunes characters in order to win a basketball game, and both movies tried way too hard to make Bugs Bunny and company appeal to a new generation. The difference is that I loved “Space Jam” when I was ten, but I found “A New Legacy” to be downright painful at 35. You could certainly point to my tastes maturing, but I still love plenty of kids’ movies, especially from Disney and Pixar. I highly suspect that “A New Legacy” is simply much worse.

The setup is that LeBron James (playing himself) is having a tough time connecting with his son Dom (Cedric Joe, who is not LeB-ron’s real son, nor are any of the actors cast as his family), who wants to design video games for a living instead of playing basketball. LeBron thinks the two can bond by visiting the Warner Brothers studio, where the executives want LeBron to agree to lending his likeness to a program that can “insert him into any property they want. LeBron thinks the program is stupid, which its algorithm, personified by Al G. Rhythm (Don Cheadle) takes personally. Al abducts both LeBron and Dom and tells LeBron that the only way to get them out of the program is to beat him in a game of basketball.

LeBron can fill up his roster with any number of Warner Brothers characters, and he’s excited at the prospect of a team filled with Superman, King Kong, and other common-sense selections. But the first character he runs into is Bugs Bunny, who stealthily stacks the

Quincy Native Joe Keohane Pens First Book

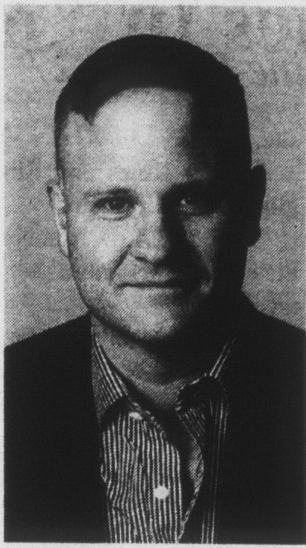

'The Power Of Strangers: The Benefits Of Connecting In A Suspicious World'

Joe Keohane, a fourth-generation Quincy native, just published his first work of non-fiction entitled "The Power of Strangers: The Benefits of Connecting in a Suspicious World."

In The Power of Strangers, Keohane sets out on a journey to discover what happens when we bridge the distance between us and the people we don't know. He learns that while we're wired to sometimes fear, distrust, and even hate strangers, people and societies that have learned to connect with strangers benefit immensely.

Digging into the growing body of cutting-edge research on the surprising social and psychological benefits that come with talking to strangers, Keohane finds that even passing interactions can enhance empathy, happiness, and cognitive functioning, ease loneliness and isolation, and root us in the world, deepening our sense of belonging. And all the while, Keohane gathers practical tips from experts on how to talk to strangers and tries them out himself in the wild, to awkward, entertaining, and frequently poignant effect.

Part of Keohane's curiosity emerged from his own parents, Ed and Joan Keohane of Quincy.

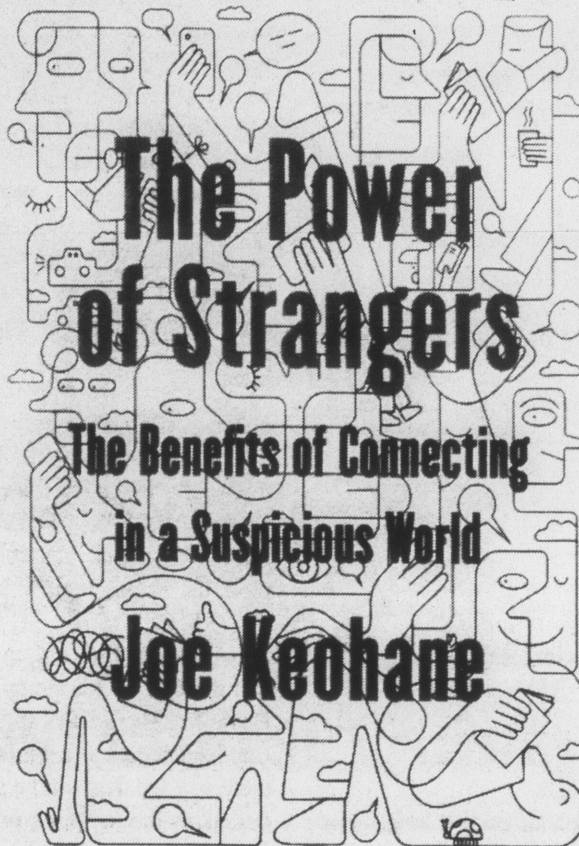

JOE KEOHANE

"My parents are world champions at talking to strangers," Joe says. "Everywhere they go, they make friends: at home, on vacation, in restaurants, on the street, it's a never-ending accumulation of friends and acquaintances. While many older people sit passively while their social circles contract, my parents are relentless in the acquisition of new friends. Talking to strangers for them - is simply indistinguishable from being alive."

This observation from his own family as well as numerous other interactions throughout his career as a writer inspired him on this story-telling journey.

Joe Keohane was educated at St. Ann's School, Quincy, Boston College

Social

High School and Villanova University and currently lives in New York City with his wife Jean and daughter June. He is a veteran journalist who has held high-level editing positions at Medium, Esquire, Entrepreneur, and Hemispheres.

His writing - on everything from politics, to travel, to social science, business, and technology - has appeared in New York magazine, The Boston Globe, The New Yorker, Wired, Boston magazine, and The New Republic.

BLUEBERRIES ARE one of the most nutritious foods with antioxidants that fight cancer, disease, and the effects of aging. Photo courtesy MelindaMyers.com

Beautiful And Tasty Blueberries

By MELINDA MYERS

Blueberries are a summer favorite, great for snacking, baking, topping your oatmeal and so much more. This nutritious fruit also adds a bit of brain power to your diet and beauty to your landscape with spring blooms, fall color, and of course tasty and colorful fruit.

Blueberries are one of the most nutritional foods loaded with antioxidants that fight cancer, disease, and the effects of aging while helping preserve your eyesight. Boost the benefits by growing your own blueberries. The act of gardening helps strengthen our muscles, increase flexibility, fights stress and boosts our mood.

Do a bit of research to find the best blueberry for your garden and dining pleasure. Planning ahead prepares you for placing your order when you are ready to plant. Anxious gardeners can put their research to work immediately. Blueberry plants are still available from some nurseries for those who are ready to plant now.

Select the blueberry plants suited to your growing conditions. Northern highbush blueberries are productive and suited to moderate climates with at least two months of temperatures below 40- degrees Fahrenheit. Southern highbush blueberries only need 200-300 hours of 32-45 degrees Fahrenheit in winter to produce fruit. This makes them a good choice for those gardening in milder climates. Lowbush blueberries are low-growing varieties native to Northeastern United States. Half-high blueberries are a cross between low and high bush blueberries, tolerating -35 to -45 degrees Fahrenheit, making them a good option for colder climates. Rabbit-eye blueberries are large shrubs and suited to areas with long, hot summers and mild winters.

Newer compact varieties allow small space gardeners, apartment dwellers and those with less-than-ideal soil the opportunity to grow their own blueberries. These smaller plants are suitable for containers as well as the garden. In addition to their compact size and tasty fruit, several have attractive foliage, adding to their ornamental appeal. The Leaves of Pink Icing variety is a mix of pink, blue and deep green. Boxwood enthusiasts will enjoy the foliage and dark blue fruit of Blueberry Buckle. And for those who cannot get enough fruit, check out Perpetua that produces two crops a year.

Find a sunny, well-drained location where your plants will thrive, produce a bountiful harvest and you can enjoy their beauty. Although most blueberries are self-fertile (you only need one plant to produce fruit), you'll get better results when growing several in your landscape or containers. Consider including several varieties with different ripening dates to extend the harvest season.

Blueberries are particular about their growing conditions. They prefer moist, well-drained and acidic soils. Properly prepare the soil by adding organic matter like compost, aged manure, or peat to the planting bed. Or grow your blueberries in a container filled with quality potting mix. Water in-ground and container plantings often enough to keep the soil moist. Mulch the soil with shredded leaves, evergreen needles, or shredded bark to keep the roots cool and moist and add organic matter to the soil as the mulch breaks down.

And don't forget to protect your harvest from hungry birds. Cover plantings with netting or try scare tactics to keep the birds and other wildlife from devouring your harvest.

Once you harvest your first ripe blueberry, you will discover there is nothing better than the flavor and satisfaction of consuming something you grew yourself.

team entirely with his fellow Looney Tunes like Daffy Duck, Porky Pig, and even the somewhat-obscure Gossamer. Not only does the team not consist of ideal athletes, but they don't even take the game seriously, spending their practice time goofing around and blowing each other up rather than focusing on fundamentals. LeBron insists they obey his orders to play the game right, the same way he insists Dom obey him and pursue basketball as a career. Will he learn that there is room in life for a little Looney-ness?

Much of the movie is an advertisement for other Warner Brothers IP's. There's the aforementioned superheroes, but also "Game of Thrones," "Harry Potter,"

"The Matrix," and many more. Even "Austin Powers" gets in on the action, and the 1997 original is my favorite movie of all time. I remember the original "Space Jam" threw in a nod to my other favorite movie, "Pulp Fiction." Parents hated they threw that reference into a kids' movie, which of course made me love it even more. During the climactic game, many classic Warner Brother characters can be seen in the crowd, with the idea that adults will watch the film over and over to spot all the cameos. It'll be more fun than watching the unfunny comedy.

"Space Jam: A New Legacy" is fun enough when the characters are engaging in classic comedy (sometimes you just want to see long, consequence-free sequences of unapologetic violence), but it's terrible when invoking "modern" comedy like rapping, pop-culture references and meta-humor. Seriously, the characters spend more time winking and arching their eyebrows at the camera than they do talking to each other. It adds up to a mess of a movie where about nine out of ten jokes are nothing more than air balls.

Grade: C-

NOTE: I was going to give this movie a D, but the audience at my screening screamed infectiously at a scene where the human star of the first "Space Jam" may or may not make a cameo. That's the magic of seeing a movie in theaters instead of at home.

WHAT'S COOKING

with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Easy Bake Anisette Cake

By MARIE

I found today's recipe for Easy Bake Anisette Cake in a cookbook that I authored years ago. The recipe was from my brother John's collection, baked for holidays and any occasion at all.

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly grease a cake pan

Ingredients and Directions:

1 stick of butter
3 cups of flour
1 cup of sugar

1 egg
1 cup of milk
1 tablespoon of baking powder
1 shot of Anisette (or two tablespoons of Anise extract)

Put all ingredients in one bowl and with a mixer, mix until well-blended.

Pour batter into the prepared cake pan and bake in a 350-degree oven for about 40 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean.

This cake will keep for days and it is delicious with morning coffee..... if there is any left over.

Eggplant Pasta

By SUZIE

Replacing starchy pasta with vegetables is always a good idea, to increase your fiber and general vegetable intake.

Everyone has heard of zucchini noodles or "spaghetti squash" but what about eggplant pasta? I made this recently with fabulous results.

Eggplants contain the ever important antioxidants (specifically anthocyanins) and have a good amount of fiber, low in calories, and contain a good amount of nutrients (including niacin, magnesium and copper).

EGGPLANT PASTA

2 medium eggplants
4 tablespoons olive oil
4 small tomatoes, chopped
1-2 garlic cloves, minced
½ tsp chili flakes
4 tablespoons chopped fresh basil

Sea salt
½ cup organic half and half
¼ cup grated parmesan cheese

Directions:

Peel each eggplant.
Slice the eggplant thinly lengthwise, about 1/4-inch thick.

Slice the pieces into thin strips to resemble pasta.

In a large saute pan heat the oil.
Add the garlic and chili flakes and toast.
Add the eggplant "pasta" and toss to coat.

Add the tomatoes and cook for 3 minutes.

Add the cream and increase heat to thicken sauce.

Finally add the basil and Parmesan and toss to combine. Season with salt and pepper. Serve.

Better Business Bureau Offers Nine Steps To Help College Students Fight ID Theft On Campus

As college students prepare to head back to campus in the next few weeks, fighting fraud may not be at the top of their list of priorities. However, college students are very susceptible to identity theft; by establishing good habits for monitoring and detecting fraud, students can lay a path for healthy financial practices for the rest of their lives.

The Better Business Bureau recommends that college-bound students take the following 9 steps to fight identity theft on campus:

- Send sensitive mail to your permanent home or a post office box. School mailboxes are not always secure and often can be accessed easily in a dorm or apartment.

- Important documents should be stored away safely. This includes your U.S. Social Security card, passport, and bank and credit card statements. Shred credit card offers and any paper documents that have sensitive financial information rather than just tossing them out.

- Never lend your credit or debit card to anyone. Just say no if your friend wants to borrow your card or asks you to co-sign for a loan or financing for items like a TV. When using an ATM or credit card machine, don't let anyone "shoulder surf" your personal identification number (PIN).

- Guard your passwords and don't give them out to anyone. Use strong passwords and don't use the same password for all sites.

- Watch for phishing. Be vigilant and be careful of clicking on links in emails and texts; verify the content with the website. More on phishing scams.

- Make sure your computer has up-to-date antivirus and spyware software. Always install any updates and patches to your computer's operating system or browser software, which help keep your computer safe from any new advances by identity thieves online.

- Always check your credit or debit card statements closely for any suspicious activity. The sooner you identify any potential fraud, the less you'll suffer in the long run.

- Be careful when shopping online. Check out businesses on BBB.org. Look for the BBB Accredited Business seal; click on the seals to confirm that they are legitimate. See BBB's tips for smart shopping online.

- Check your credit report at least once a year. You are entitled to one free report a year from each of the three reporting bureaus: TransUnion, Experian and Equifax. Look for any suspicious activity or inaccuracies. You can do this for free by visiting www.annualcreditreport.com.

For more advice on fighting fraud and managing personal finances, visit BBB.org/news.

Stop & Shop Recognized For Efforts During COVID-19 Pandemic

For more than 40 years, the Association for Women in Communications' Clarion Awards have recognized excellence in clear and concise communications.

Stop & Shop, a neighborhood grocer for more than 100 years, announces that it has been honored with an Association for Women in Communication (AWC) 2021 Clarion Award for its excellence in the field of communications.

Stop & Shop was awarded a Clarion for its efforts during the COVID-19 pandemic. The award specifically honors the company's crisis communications response with regard to safety, driving awareness for its designated shopping hours for those described by the CDC as most vulnerable to COVID-19 and a partnership with Uber to provide discounted rides to customers shopping during these dedicated hours.

The winning crisis response campaigns, led by Stop & Shop's Director of External Communications and Community Relations, Jennifer Brogan, with the support of External Communications Managers Maria Fruci, Maura O'Brien, and Stefanie Shuman, showcased Stop & Shop's role in the fight against COVID-19. Stop & Shop became one of the first grocery chains in the nation to provide early shopping hours for those aged 60 and older and those considered immunocompromised, allowing them to shop ahead of regular store hours in a less crowded environment.

The grocer furthered its commitment to support those at-risk by partnering with Uber Technologies, Inc., to provide half-price rides to and from all stores for customers wishing to shop during the dedicated senior hours.

"As an all-female communications team, we are proud to be recognized by AWC for our PR campaign around Stop & Shop's support for those most vulnerable in our communities," Brogan said. "As our store teams were working tirelessly to support customers at the height of the pandemic, the goal of our communications team was to drive awareness around these initiatives to help provide resources and a lifeline to those in need of special assistance."

Both of Stop & Shop's crisis communications initiatives garnered significant national and local recognition. Stop & Shop's public relations agencies, New York-based Rubenstein and an all-female team at Boston-based Kel & Partners, generated more than 500 media hits with a total of 350 million impressions via tailored media outreach.

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty: Should I Claim Family Benefits?

By RUSSELL GLOOR

National Social Security Advisor

At the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm
Of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I was born in 1956 and my wife in 1961. I've got 45 years of SSA earnings, and I will have income in 2021. We have 4 minor children, the youngest born in 2012. When is the best time for us to apply for benefits? Are we eligible for family benefits? My statement infers that we are.
Signed: Older Dad

Dear Older Dad: Born in 1956, your full retirement age (FRA) for Social Security purposes is 66 years and 4 months. If you claim your SS benefit at any time before your FRA, it will be permanently reduced. If, for example, you claimed your SS benefits now, the amount would be permanently cut by about 14%. Your wife's FRA is 67 and, similarly, she will receive a reduced SS retirement or SS spousal benefit if taken any time before her FRA.

Your wife isn't normally eligible for benefits until she is 62 years old, but if she is providing full time childcare to your minor children, she is eligible for spouse benefits sooner. Child-in-care spouse benefits are available at any age for your wife if she is providing care for at least one of your minor children under the age of 16. You must be collecting your own SS benefit for your wife to be eligible for this.

Once you start collecting your Social Security, your minor children will become eligible for benefits also. Minor child benefits are available to any child under the age of 18, or 19 if still in high school. All your children who qualify under that definition would be eligible for benefits based upon your Social Security earnings record. But, because of Social Security's Family Maximum, the amount each child receives would be less than half of your FRA benefit amount.

The Family Maximum amount is different for everyone because it is computed using each person's Primary Insurance Amount, or "PIA," which is the amount you are entitled to at your FRA. The Family Maximum normally computes to somewhere between 150% and 180% of the primary beneficiary's PIA, and that amount is shared by all those collecting. So, in your family's case, your PIA amount is first deducted from your Family Maximum amount and the remaining 50% to 80% is equally apportioned among all those collecting benefits on your record (including your wife if she receives child-in-care benefits). If all 4 of your children are minors, and your wife is collecting child-in-care benefits, those 5 individuals would each receive an equal portion of the remaining family maximum amount after your PIA is deducted.

It's probable that your family would get the entire family maximum amount, for as long as your wife and minor children are eligible for benefits. But remember that claiming your own benefit before your full retirement age results in a permanent reduction to the benefit you will receive for the rest of your life. So, you should evaluate which option is financially better considering your life expectancy - claiming now and getting the full Family Maximum amount in these earlier years or waiting longer (even up to age 70) to receive a higher personal benefit for the rest of your life. You should also consider that if you die first, your wife's survivor benefit will be based upon the amount you are receiving at your death, so the age at which you claim also affects your wife's benefit as your widow.

Finally, if you claim before you have reached your full retirement age, Social Security's earnings limit will apply until you reach your FRA. If you work and exceed the limit ($18,960 for 2021), Social Security may withhold your benefits for several months, and your dependents won't receive their benefits while yours are withheld. Note too that your earnings limit will go up by about 2.5 times during the year you attain FRA.

THE GYPSY MOTHS performed in Squantum during the 2019 PorchFest Quincy event. The Boston-based band, whose members include Quincy residents, are set to perform at this year's PorchFest on Saturday, Sept. 25. The event will run from 3 to 9 p.m. that day.

PorchFest Quincy Returning Sept. 25

By SCOTT JACKSON

The annual PorchFest Quincy event - which features more than 100 musical acts performing throughout three city neighborhoods - is set take place in September following a one-year hiatus.

The event will be held from 3 to 9 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 25. Bands and other musical acts will be performing on porches and in yards and driveways in the Merrymount, Squantum and Wollaston Hill neighborhoods that day.

PorchFest Quincy began in June 2016 in the Wollaston Hill neighborhood and expanded over the following years to other areas of the city. More than 130 performers took part in the 2019 PorchFest, playing at 80 different locations.

Last year's PorchFest was cancelled amid the pandemic. Walter Hubley, one of the event's organizers, said he is excited it will be returning in the fall.

"A lot of planning goes into making this work and we are excited to get this going again," he said. "The community has really embraced PorchFest."

"People have told me how important this event is to them and how they got to meet new people from across the city," Hubley added. "Music is powerful because the love for music crosses all cultures and demographics. People who have little in common otherwise can find something in common through music. This event creates a shared experience where people find something in common through music."

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, who cofounded the event in 2016, said he was also excited for PorchFest's return.

"We are pumped it is happening again," Cain said. "Registration for bands and for porches just went out on July 5 and that will be open for the next month or so, month and a half, and then start planning."

"I almost wish we had done it in June because things started coming back, but it will be nice to do this in September when hopefully we don't have much in the way of competition."

As of July 21, Hubley said 44 bands had registered for the event and 24 residents had volunteered to host a performance.

"We are on pace to match 2019," he said.

Cain said he likewise expects there would be as many performers this year as there were in 2019.

"I anticipate we will have as many this year, only because I think there is still some pent up energy from people being cooped up for the last year, so they are excited to get back to a fun event," he said.

The event features an eclectic mix of performers from throughout the surrounding area.

"They come from all over the region, the Greater Boston area," Cain said. "There are all different genres of music. We've had the Quincy Symphony Orchestra play in the past, an ensemble from the Quincy Symphony Orchestra. We've had different types of rock groups. There was a sort of burlesque, '70s California beachy vibe thing going that was awesome a couple years ago."

"You really get all different kinds and people can select their flavor."

Among the bands that have already registered for this year's events are the Gypsy Moths, a Boston-based band whose members

On Wednesday, July 21, Officer Scott Kelley was working the 4 p.m.-midnight shift assigned to the Quincy Center area of the city. He was wearing a full Quincy Police uniform while conducting patrol on foot.

At approximately 7:40 p.m., officers were dispatched to the area of Hancock Street and Cottage Avenue on the report of an intoxicated white male, wearing a Nirvana T-shirt, making threats to stab people. Upon arrival, officers located the male party who was yelling obscenities at patrons outside of ALBA Restaurant.

Officers asked him to refrain from the yelling and he responded, "f*#@ you, I didn't do anything wrong." Officers advised the male that they had received a call for a party matching his description that just made threats to stab someone. The male was then pat frisked for weapons with negative results.

The male stated that he didn't do anything wrong and made several attempts to walk away while officers were speaking with him. Officers noted that he was unsteady on his feet and stumbled several times until he was advised to have a seat on the ground.

Officer Kelley asked the male if he had consumed any alcohol to which he stated that he only had 5 drinks since 2 p.m. Officer Kelley advised the male that an ambulance had been requested due to his level of intoxication, explaining that he wanted to have him checked out. The male became irate and began to yell "I'm not drunk, I didn't do anything wrong." He also said "f*#@ all those people, they're the ones who are wrong" referring to the crowd of roughly 15 people that were on the sidewalk and had focused their attention on his tumultuous behavior.

The male continued to yell "F*#@ you, just let me go home" and then began to roll around in the mulch. Officers advised him that if he continued with this behavior he was going to be placed under arrest for disorderly conduct. He then yelled "F*#@ you, I don't give a f*#@ if you arrest me" and attempted to stand up.

Officer Ruggiero and Officer Kelley assisted him to his feet and placed him under arrest for Disorderly Conduct. He was transported to the police station where he was booked in the usual manner by Sgt. Allison.

Officer Kelley then spoke with the reporting party, the manager at an area restaurant located on Hancock Street. The reporting party stated that the male had stumbled into the restaurant at approximately 7:30 p.m. and asked if anyone found his lighter. The manager informed him that no one had found his lighter and asked him to leave the restaurant. The male then became upset and started to yell obscenities at him. The manager told him to leave the restaurant to which the male stated, "I'll leave, but I'm going to come back and stab you."

The male exited the restaurant and began jumping on the tables in front of the restaurant while screaming "You don't own this property, you can't make me leave." He then yelled "I'm going to come back and stab you" and began to walk away. The manager stated that he called the police because he wanted the male to get some help and that he was afraid he was going to hurt someone.

Based on information provided by the manager, the 60-year-old male from Quincy was additionally charged with threats to commit a crime.

FHA Forbearance Relief Available For Delinquent Mortgages Due To Pandemic

The Boston regional office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is encouraging "FHA borrowers" who are delinquent on their mortgages to contact their lenders to request a special forbearance program that is currently being offered due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

"FHA" stands for the Federal Housing Administration, which is overseen by HUD. According to HUD, there are over 300,000 FHA borrowers across the country who are at least 60 days delinquent on their mortgage, but have not sought help to avoid future foreclosure.

"All FHA borrowers who are delinquent should have received a letter from HUD in mid-June, but this additional outreach is being done to let borrowers know that help is really out there, and that the federal government is trying to prevent borrowers from losing their homes," said Sean Glennon, Community Development Director for the City of Quincy.

If a borrower is not sure if they have an FHA loan, they can either look at the top of their "HUD-1" settlement form which would have been provided to them at closing, or contact their lender to verify.

For those that do have an FHA loan, they must contact their lender (or mortgage servicer) as soon as possible to request the COVID-19 forbearance, which would provide a temporary pause or reduction in mortgage payments. The program is set to expire on Sept. 30, which means borrowers have until that time to request forbearance.

Mortgage relief is also available to some extent for those with other government-backed mortgages (Veterans Administration, Fannie Mae, or Freddie Mac), and the same process applies. Borrowers should call their servicer at the number on their statement and ask for forbearance.

Glennon says it is much better for a homeowner to request a forbearance than to ignore delinquency letters. "With the forbearance, you're getting permission from your lender to suspend or reduce payments, which prevents, or at least postpones, foreclosure. The same cannot be said for ignoring letters from a servicer."

If borrowers are unable to contact their mortgage servicer, they may consider contacting a "HUD-approved" housing counselor. This designation means the counselor is trained to assess a household's financial situation and explain options available to them. Locally, HUD-approved housing counseling agencies include Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) and NeighborWorks Housing Solutions (NHS). QCAP can be reached by contacting Keely Elta, Homeownership Coordinator at 617-657-5315 or Kelta@qcac.org. NHS may be reached by calling their housing counseling hotline at (781) 422-4208.

and youth sports would be prohibited, along with betting on the performance of individual college athletes and on injuries, penalties and discipline.

During a recent interview held prior to the House vote, Sen. John Keenan (D-Quincy) said he believed both chambers would be able to pass legislation to authorize sports betting.

"I think the chances are pretty good. What format it will take and when it is done, I can't say," he said.

"At this stage, the Senate has not set any sort of a date to take up the bill. So, the House will pass it, I presume. It will come to the Senate. I don't think the Senate will rush right into it, but you just don't know. You just don't know, but I think the chances are better than they have been in the past."

Keenan said he would support legislation to legalize betting on professional and college sports, provided it is properly regulated.

"If we have sports betting that is going to go to other surrounding states or go offshore and we know it is going to occur then we should allow it, regulate it and get the revenue from it," he said.

House Speaker Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy) in March told the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce that legalizing sports betting in Massachusetts could provide more than $50 million in annual revenue to the state.

"I continue to support sports betting legislation that creates in-person and mobile gaming licenses that will bolster existing casinos and racing facilities," Mariano said at the time. "Our legislation will also correct the unacceptable result of the current legal landscape, which forbids a home-grown business like DraftKings from offering its product within its own borders. DraftKings was created here, they've stayed here, and they've grown here. It's time Massachusetts allows them a future here."

The initial revenue from sports betting would go to the state's gaming commission, Keenan said, and the legislature will determine where the rest goes.

"The initial revenue from allowing sports gambling would go to the gaming commission which will oversee it to make sure it is running properly," he said. "Where the revenue goes after that, I assume is going to be subject of negotiation, much as it was with the casinos and [with] the casinos it goes to all kinds of different buckets."

One of the issues that has delayed the approval of sports betting in the state is how to handle gambling on college sports, Keenan said.

"I think how to approach college sports has been a hang up," he stated. "That is still unknown how it is going to work out, but college sports has been one of the issues."

Approximately half the states with legalized sports betting do not allow gambling on in-state colleges, including Connecticut, New Hampshire, New York and Rhode Island.

Keenan said he would like to see certain safeguards in place to protect bettors as part of the legislation.

"One of the things we are looking at is how to put some safeguards in place in terms of how much can people bet," he said. "I don't know whether the other states do anything like this, but there is always a discussion about whether you just allow debit card use and cash only or would you fund some sort of account that you then utilize for gambling."

"I would not want to see credit cards being able to be used for online betting. Then there is no limit, essentially, for what people can bet and it creates some personal financial issues for people."

"I don't know how that will work out either. I don't know whether the House bill addresses that."

with those provisions and I voted for it again," Keenan said.

"I've talked pretty frequently with Quincy City Clerk Nicole Crispo on all kinds of things related to elections and have talked to the clerks either in the spring elections at the polling places or the elections last fall asking them how it was. I was down in Abington on Election Day and saw what they were doing. If they have the resources, they feel confident that they can do what is required by statute. They got through it last time without any real issues and the election seemed to go well, the integrity of the election held, so this will keep that in place for the fall and then look at what is next."

The mail-in option, which would be available for a potential preliminary municipal election in September and the final election in November, would operate the same as it did last year, meaning voters would have to request a mail-in ballot before they receive one.

"It should run just like it did last year, and that worked well," Keenan said.

"People sent their request in for a ballot, they got their ballot in the mail, they had enough time to then complete it and send it back."

"There is always the option, even if you get it in the mail, that you can decide to vote in-person if you haven't returned it."

Keenan credited Crispo and the election officials in the other communities he represents — Abington, Braintree, Holbrook and Rockland — for their work last year when the state first allowed mail-in voting.

"I would say thank you to the clerks in Quincy and the towns," he said. "Last year, it was difficult. They had to put it together quickly and they did a great job with it and people really appreciated it. It wasn't just seniors that appreciated it — I think across the board people appreciated the flexibility."

State funds will be available to communities to help pay for the mail-in and early voting options, Keenan said.

"Yes, they have in the past and we had worked previously to get some money for local communities in my district. There will be funds available," he responded when asked if the state would provide funding to municipalities.

"What we ended up hearing from municipalities after the last time was that it wasn't a huge financial strain on them. Once they kind of got things organized and went through it, they adjusted pretty well."

But there is a cost. You have a police detail cost, for instance, for a longer period of time, you do have people working a greater number of hours during that period of time when it is early voting, but it seemed to work quite well."

Keenan said that offering mail-in and early voting options to residents makes it easier for them to cast ballots in elections.

"I can say, as a candidate for many years, when you have voting on one day it is difficult for some people to vote on that one day," he said.

"I know a lot of people will say, 'well, you will find a way if you are really interested in voting,' but people have childcare issues. They have work issues — both spouses might be working. There are so many demands on people for their time and their work schedule sometimes, and traffic, make it very difficult for people to vote."

"We accommodated them through COVID and found out people really appreciated having that flexibility. You don't know whether that flexibility accounted for the increased turnout or whether the candidates on the ballot accounted for that increased turnout, but everything I heard back from people is that they really appreciated the flexibility."

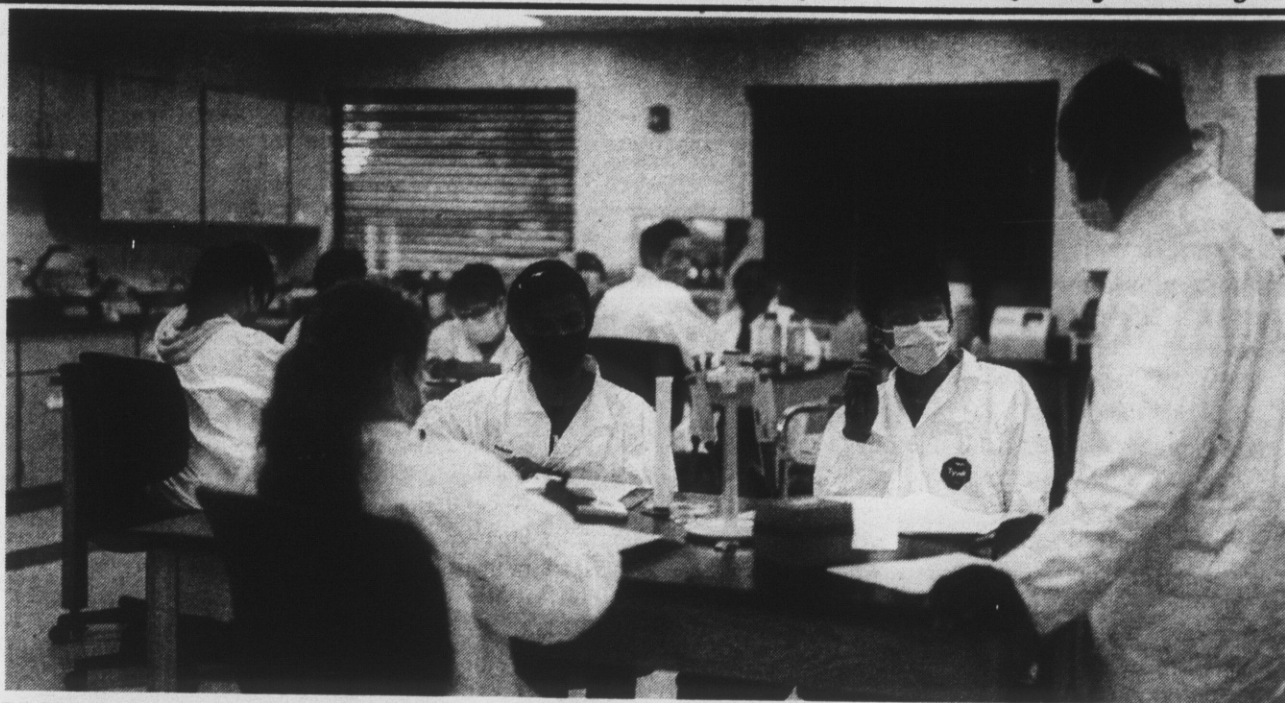

Keenan said he was not concerned about voting fraud because of how rare it is. The mail-in voting process, he explained, is the same one used for absentee balloting.

"It is no different from what the process was for absentee ballots. You get to do an absentee ballot without having to meet the requirements for having to get an absentee ballot — that you are going to be out of state or in the hospital or something else like that," Keenan said.

"Over the years in Quincy, I'm not aware of there ever being an issue with absentee ballots and this just makes it more readily available to people. I don't have any concerns that are any greater than what I had under the old system. You just have to be vigilant, you have to have a good system in place, and Quincy and the communities I represent have always been vigilant and they have always had a good system in place."

"You hear all these things about, 'people go out and they take ballots out of mailboxes.' People still say, 'all these ballots were just mailed to people without them asking.' That is just not how it worked. Even if it was, the bottom line is your name is on a voting list and there is a ballot and if the ballot is cast, the name is checked on the voting list. If I went in with 15 extra ballots, they are not going to count me for 15 ballots."

"It is one to one — one person, one vote — and the system is designed to ensure that is what happens."

Major Increase In Residential, Commercial Sales In Norfolk County

ter of 2020. This is a strong growth from last year," O'Donnell said.

For the first half of 2021, the number of land documents recorded, (such as deeds, mortgages, Homesteads, mortgage discharges, etc.) was 103,023, a 37% gain from the previous year.

"This robust figure tells us there is a healthy real estate market," O'Donnell said. "I also greatly appreciate the efforts of the dedicated Registry of Deeds staff to process this document volume."

O'Donnell also noted there were 26,042 mortgages recorded at the Registry during the first half of the calendar year 2021 compared to 19,019 for the same time period in 2020. This is a 37% increase in the first half of 2021 over the same period in 2020. Total mortgage borrowing was $12.3 billion for the first half of the year compared to $8.9 billion during the first half of 2020.

"With the reduction in interest rates, consumers seem to be more comfortable borrowing money," O'Donnell said.

Norfolk County homeowners continued to benefit from the Homestead Act, according to O'Donnell. A total of 6,425 Homesteads were recorded during the first half of the calendar year, a 29% increase year over year.

"The Homestead law provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000. I urge Norfolk County residents to consider this important consumer protection tool," O'Donnell said.

The register's report also showed foreclosure activity in Norfolk County continued to show signs of improvement. A total of 22 foreclosure deeds were recorded versus 69 filed during the first half of 2020. In addition, there was a significant 59% drop in the number of Notice to Foreclose

Lawmakers Concerned About COVID Delta Variant

By SCOTT JACKSON

Massachusetts lawmakers are concerned about a more contagious variant of the coronavirus that causes COVID-19, Sen. John Keenan said in a recent interview, and state officials will likely increase efforts to vaccinate residents against the virus.

There has been no discussion about making the vaccine mandatory or issuing vaccine passports, Keenan added.

The new variant, known as the delta variant, emerged in India and is responsible for more than 80 percent of sequenced new COVID-19 infections in the United States, the director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said recently. The CDC has identified it as one of three variants of concern circulating in the country.

Keenan, a Quincy Democrat, was asked about the variant during a recent interview. He said lawmakers are concerned about the variant and want to make sure the state would be able to address it.

"There has been little discussion about it on Beacon Hill, but there is some concern and it showed itself yesterday," Keenan said.

Keenan was referring to a July 20 hearing of the Joint Committee on Ways and Means where Sen. Michael Rodrigues, the Senate chairperson of the committee, questioned Gov. Charlie Baker about his decision to allocate $186 million in American Rescue Plan Act money towards health and human services' workforce development, fiscally distressed hospitals, acute-care psychiatric facilities and workforce training.

"Sen. Rodrigues...challenged the governor on how he has spent some of that $200 million, or how he is proposing to spend some of that $200 million, and wanted to convey to the governor that that money was put aside, and I can't remember the phrase he used, but some metaphor for a break-the-glass emergency," Keenan said. "That money was there for truly an emergency situation as it relates to COVID and variants, and given what we are hearing about delta the legislature is particularly concerned that that money be available in case we have to respond."

"They asked the governor if the variant should have a greater impact than it has now, are we in a position where we will have proper PPE and the governor said he cannot imagine a situation where we would not, so the state has done a lot of that stockpiling of inventory of PPE."

"[Baker] feels confident that is in place, but the legislature, based on the inquiry of the governor and how he spent the money, displayed they are concerned about the delta variant - not to the extent that there has been any discussion about mandatory vaccinations, mandatory mask wearing or anything of that sort."

With the spread of the new variant on the rise, Keenan said he expects the state will redouble its efforts to get people vaccinated.

"The big push is to get people vaccinated. Massachusetts has done a good job of it," he said. "There are still some people who are hesitant to get vaccinated and I think there will be a renewed push, particularly with the new variant now, to get vaccinated."

"We have had over 5,000 cases of breakthrough infections [in fully vaccinated individuals] and in most cases people are asymptomatic... or minor symptoms, but there are cases where there is a breakthrough infection and so it becomes all that much more critical for people to get vaccinated. The more people that get vaccinated, the less spread of the virus and the less chance there will be breakthrough infections and less chance that people will end up in the hospital in intensive care like they might otherwise be if they are not vaccinated."

Massachusetts operated several mass vaccination sites - such as Gillette Stadium, Fenway Park, the Hynes Convention Center and the Reggie Lewis Center - earlier this year. The last of those sites, a former Circuit City in Dartmouth, closed earlier this month.

Keenan said there has been no discussion about reopening the mass vaccination sites. Instead, the focus will be on trying to get to people where they are at.

"If they are at some sort of a big community event, have people there that are ready to vaccinate if somebody says, 'OK, it is here, I am here, I will get vaccinated,'" he said. "There is a lot more effort to get people where they are at and to get them vaccinated, so there are smaller vaccination operations. There are some mobile ones that are popping up. That is the goal."

Keenan said there have been no discussions among lawmakers about either mandating the vaccine or issuing vaccine passports.

"I have not heard discussion about either one of those other than the governor being asked and saying that he has no plans presently," he said.

At the moment, Keenan said he believes it would not be necessary to take either of those steps.

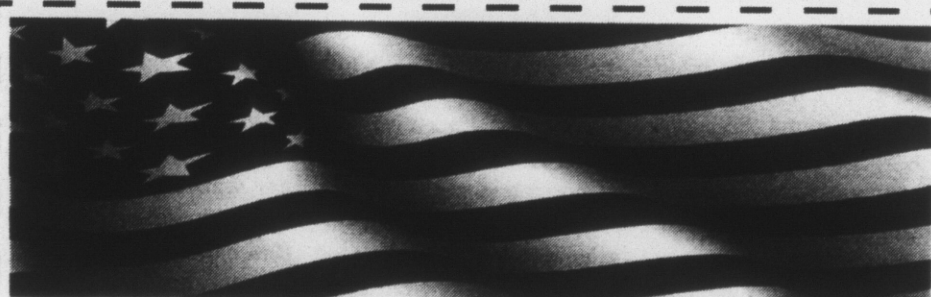

"At this stage, I don't think there is a need for it," he said.

"If people would just get vaccinated, I don't think there will be a need for it, so we have to address why people are concerned about getting vaccinated, address those concerns, get them vaccinated, and if we do all those things, it will be good for our public health, it will be good for our economy, and it will keep the delta variant at bay, at least here in Massachusetts."

As of July 21, 71.8 percent of all Massachusetts residents had received at least one dose of the COVID-19 vaccine, and 63.3 percent were fully vaccinated. Only Vermont had a higher percentage of fully vaccinated residents.

Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire were ranked third, fourth, fifth and seventh overall, respectively, in terms of fully vaccinated residents as a percent of their total populations.

Mayor's Naming Of Councillor Ian Cain As Commissioner Chairperson 'Excellent Choice'

As someone who has known Ian Cain since he was a college student back during his dad's (John Cain) campaign for Ward 3 city councillor, I believe the naming of Ian Cain as the chairperson of the mayor's commission on diversity, equity and inclusion was an excellent choice by Mayor Tom Koch. The other names joining this commission are also very good and qualified choices too.

While I, myself, was never supportive of a city department dedicated to this issue of racial justice in the city, I think this commission is the right route to take. I also agree with Cain: this has to be a real commission focused on the reality of race in the city. I believe the commission needs to look at the facts uncovered and it should keep the scope as non-political as possible. There are too many people out and about Quincy who won't be satisfied until something bad is found in Quincy.

One question this commission should focus on is how safe is Quincy for the various communities that now call Quincy home? I lived in Quincy from 1983 until 2009 and know firsthand the progress the City of Quincy had made when it came to race and cultural issues among neighborhood residents. Over those 26 years living mostly in North Quincy (and Wollaston, too) I saw Quincy, especially North Quincy mature into a very diverse place. It started out as tolerance but eventually arrived at acceptance for the most part, once again especially among the city's youth.

I have been a substitute teacher for the Quincy Public Schools since retiring as a police officer in 2013. Younger people are so much more accepting of each other regardless of race among other things. They have far less baggage than we adults. The future of this city will only improve as time moves forward.

I really believe that Quincy is an open city for all. Yes there are bad actors here but for the most part, people really just see other people as people too. When it comes to issues of complexion or culture, Quincy has done better than most, maybe all communities south of the Neponset Bridge.

Hopefully, citizens will trust this commission. If they have issues or stories to tell, that is what this commission is there to do. No one is saying Quincy is a perfect community, there is no perfect community. We can only just get better by looking deeper inside ourselves.

The whole purpose of this commission isn't to rubber stamp what the mayor wants to hear. I am disheartened when I read that kind of stuff on the letters page of The Quincy Sun.

Surely, some data compiled by this commission might shine negatively on Quincy. I would be surprised if it didn't. This country is divided at the moment and it would be impossible for some of that division not to rear its head here. Hopefully, it shouldn't be a major issue but even so, it needs to be documented and addressed on a city-wide level.

I have hope that this commission will do its job and search high and low and listen to its citizens who come forward to speak about their negative and positive experiences, living in Quincy. This city will only get better for hearing the truth whatever that is.

I will make no assumptions as to what the commission will detect or uncover but I have faith that the caliber of the commission's members will ensure that the City of Quincy will strive to be the best it can be. I want this commission to do a good job and present the picture where Quincy is doing good and where it can do better. However, always remembering that the hardest job will be that of its residents making sure their neighborhoods are welcoming places for all.

Thank you Mr. Mayor, thank you Ward 3 City Councillor Ian Cain and all the commission members. This is an important city assignment and it needs full support from all to do its job properly.

Calls Mayor's Commission 'Diversionsary Tactic, Mere Shadow Play'

I am saddened by the deep cynicism and sheer wastefulness of Mayor Koch's Commission on Diversity, Equity & Inclusion.

First, I believe that each of the nine Commissioners is a hardworking, decent citizen who is committed to the best interests of the City of Quincy. Still, to be clear, this Commission is not independent. It is a tool of Mayor Koch's; its members having been selected because they will play nice with him because... well, they must.

Do we agree that time is the most precious commodity that we human beings have in our finite lives? Then I feel sorry for the Commissioners who are caught being pawns in Mayor Koch's Long Game to oppose the City Council's Ordinance to establish a Department of Social Justice & Equity. He already ran out the clock for the city's budget for FY 2021-22.

This Commission is a diversionsary tactic, mere shadow play. These capable administrators and leaders are a diverse group of individuals who do represent several very different constituencies. Not a single one was praised by Mayor Koch for their training or expertise in Diversity, Equity & Inclusion. Yet, that is what they are tasked to report upon.

I humbly suggest to the Commissioners that they watch and listen to the testimony of dozens of City residents who spoke so compellingly prior to the City Council's meeting on Jan. 19th at which they passed the Ordinance 8-1. It is available on QATV. Mayor Koch admits that he never watched it.

Sporting his rose colored glasses, Mayor Koch does not want a director of Social Justice & Equity. His Commissioners know this. More valuable time will be wasted while the Commission repeats the work done by the City Council last year. The nine Commissioners are a volunteer group; if we were to put a dollar value on the combined hours that they will expend over the next several months, I think that the salary of a director of Social Justice & Equity will prove to be a bargain.

Thank you for your consideration of this letter,
Claire Fitzmaurice

Wishes 'Coach Fran' A Happy Retirement

As a long time resident of Quincy and now living on Cape Cod, I still read The Quincy Sun to keep updated. Recently I read of the retirement of John Franceschini from the Quincy Public Schools. I have known John/Fran/Franny for over 50 years and am proud to call him a friend. Reading of his farewell to his students at Sterling (it will always be Sterling to me) brought back many memories.

Franny was always involved in the City of Quincy as an educator, a coach and a friend to many. I was a coaching colleague and served on the Mass. Basketball Coaches Association with Franny and saw firsthand all the work he did for athletes and coaches as Director of that group for many years. I saw all the work he did for Quincy youth, running the Quincy Rec tennis tournament, at golf clinics and countless hours of basketball coaching. Franny ran a great golf tournament benefitting Quincy basketball and had a loyal following who participated every year. It would be impossible to estimate what Franny has given to the City of Quincy and it's youth, but it's a lot! Wishing "Coach Fran" and his beautiful family all the best in his retirement.

Police Should Wear Body Cameras

Why should there be any discussion about police cameras for Quincy Police? Emphatically "Yes", the police should wear them.

In fact, all police departments, should be required to wear them. That way, there would be more transparency, and less questions about any police involved incidents.

Both police and people involved would be covered, and there would be some solid evidence with the camera footage.

In fact, I'm frankly very surprised that the Quincy Police aren't wearing them now. This is a public safety and trust issue, not a police union / political issue / whatever some may want to make it out to be.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Quilter Or Imposter?

By BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Readers, I thought you might like this silly reflection piece this week. Barb

When people ask me what I do for a living, I say that I am an interior decorator and quilt artist.

You see, I've been sewing since I was a kid and discovered the joy of quilting some 40 years ago. These days I have more time to pursue my passion and I'm loving every minute of it. In fact, I now belong to four quilt guilds from Abington to Arlington, give quilt lectures and trunk shows across New England, sell custom quilts (both traditional and art pieces), and am honored to receive the occasional invitation for a one-woman quilt show to display my work.

But am I really a quilter? During my turn at show 'n tell at a guild meeting recently, one wise elder "schooled" me on the proper definition of a quilt. "You know, a quilt is three layers stitched together." This was not news to me, and she is absolutely correct. I don't add those intricate stitches in beautiful patterns to my quilts, so I'm not technically a quilter.

So, I started thinking about how I am different from the quilters with whom I associate.

-- Some quilters I know own three or more sewing machines, not counting a long-arm quilting machine or embroidery machine. They wouldn't fit in my condo, and I truly only need one!

-- I don't collect fabric. I only buy what I need; well, most of the time!

-- In designing my improv patchwork pieces, I often use leftover decorator fabric or thrift store finds. Ahhh, the thrill of a bargain!

-- Instead of sewing bed quilts, I prefer to make wall hangings so I can change them often -- remember, I am an interior decorator!

-- From time to time, I enjoy reimagining pre-printed panels instead of sewing traditional blocks. Real quilters call these panels "cheater cloths;" to me, they are artistic inspiration pieces!

-- And I don't believe in UFOs -- unfinished objects. I complete my projects so I can joyfully move on to the next. So many ideas, so little time!

Some call me a textile artist. But that sounds pretentious, no? Hence, I continue to call myself a quilter even though I am indeed an imposter!

AAA: Gasoline Prices Same

Massachusetts's average gas price is the same as last week, averaging $3.02 per gallon.

Monday's price is four cents higher than a month ago ($2.98), and 88 cents higher than July 26, 2020 ($2.14). Massachusetts's average gas price is 13 cents lower than the national average.

"For pump prices to push less expensive, OPEC will need to follow through with their production increases, crude will need to sell consistently at lower prices and the market will need to adjust to the potential resurgence of COVID cases," said Mary Maguire, AAA Northeast Director of Public and Government Affairs. "If these factors prove true consistently, pump prices could be less expensive in August, though the national average could still be at or above the $3 per gallon mark."

THE REV. DR. MICHELLE WALSH offers a prayer during the John Quincy Adams birthday anniversary ceremony at United First Parish Church.

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH said of President John Quincy Adams, "He was an incredible individual, a great American, a great patriot."

CITY COUNCIL PRESIDENT Nina Liang said John Quincy Adams "Ultimately, he stood by his convictions for what he believed would be for the common good."

the takeaway from Adams' life is, "If there is anything we should learn in politics, it is we should do the right thing."

City Council President Nina Liang said that Adams "set the foundation for what our community represents."

She related how the pandemic and the call for social justice over the past year challenged the country's way of life and forced everyone to have the courage to take a "leap of faith" when making tough decisions, hoping they were the right ones. Liang drew a correlation between current times and that of how Adams faced tough decisions and had the courage to stand by them.

"Ultimately, he stood by his convictions for what he believed would be for the common good," she said. "As we celebrate his birthday today, let us remember his legacy he leaves us; to stand for what you believe in, to lead by example, and to demonstrate what it truly means to have courage and leadership."

Kelly Cobble of the Adams National Historical Park in Quincy spoke of how Adams' political courage was born in the Quincy neighborhood of the United First Parish Church.

"John Quincy's knowledge of right and wrong, tenacity and ambition sprung from this community," she said. "He was nurtured and educated by his honest father and kind mother...he followed the path that parents set out for him."

Cobble went on to detail Adams' defense of human rights and his strong opposition to slavery. He compared the slaves' fight for freedom to the colonies seeking independence from Britain's rule.

"They (slaves) had been taken against their will and had the right to fight for their freedom, just as we had," she said of Adams' anti-slavery argument.

Cobble said that John Quincy was encouraged by his mother, Abigail, to advocate for education. He pushed for establishing a national university for the arts and science. Adams also proposed a system of roads and canals.

"He continued his battle to protect human rights and slavery until his death on the Capitol floor in 1848," she said. "From a small boy witnessing the Battle of Bunker Hill from right down the street (Penn's Hill) to his 70 years of public service, he was one of our most courageous public servants in our country."

Edward Fitzgerald of the Quincy Historical Society read excerpts from Adams' diary detailing his political career. The diary noted the opposition Adams often faced for his advocacy of various initiatives including abolishing slavery.

Fitzgerald spoke of Adams' "political courage and his commitment to the include Quincy residents. The band has recently been featured in the top ten on independent radio in North America, Asia, Australia and Europe.

Others who have signed up include the acapella groups Joyful2, Copley Cats, and Just for Today; Up the Downs, a rock band with Irish, blues and country influences; Bak-to-Bak, a country band that has performed at the event annually; the Pesants, a garage band that Hubley said "kills it each year" on Bellevue Road; the Porch Trio, an avant-garde jazz group that started at the 2016 PorchFest; the Atlantic Youth Orchestra; Amory Siverston, a podcast host, reporter and producer for WBUR and a singer-songwriter who is about to release her fourth full-length album; the jazz fusion band Obscure Notion; and Robert Bushinsky, a South-Shore based electro-rock vocalist, keyboarder and songwriter influenced by 1980s new wave and synth-pop.

Musical acts looking to perform this year can sign up online at porchfestquincy.org, as can residents looking to host performers. Registration closes in early September.

Residents can also purchase PorchFest Quincy t-shirts online through the website; t-shirt sales, Hubley said, help fund the event. Those t-shirts are also available for sale at the Townshend at 1250 Hancock St., Purefections Chocolate at 1348 Hancock St., and Cucina Mia at 94 Washington St.

In addition to the musical performances, Hubley said food trucks would be setting up shop in each of the three neighborhoods. Those plans are still being finalized.

The event is free for all to attend, and Hubley estimated between 8,000 and 10,000 people attended the 2019 PorchFest. He said it was difficult to estimate how many people would attend September's event because, while many people in the state have been vaccinated against COVID-19, some might still be hesitant to attend large gatherings.

PorchFest Quincy had been held in June in previous years. It could stay in September in future years, depending on how this year's event goes.

"We are going to see how September works for the event," Hubley said. "It might be a nice time of year for the event and we will consider keeping it in September."

Quincy Center Pizzeria Granted Beer, Wine License

By SCOTT JACKSON

A long-time Quincy Center pizzeria will soon be able to offer its customers beer and wine.

The Board of License Commissioners on July 20 approved the request of Angelina's Pizza, located at 1437 Hancock St., for a wine and malt beverage license.

Manager Annie Berkachi told the board she was hopeful alcohol sales would help attract more customers to the restaurant.

"We are looking to add the beer and wine just to complement our food and try and get people more in the door," she said. "We plan on doing some renovations, and just fixing it up a little bit and adding to our business."

Angelina's hours are 10 a.m. to 12 a.m. seven days a week. Berkachi said alcohol would be offered daily after 2 p.m. — the restaurant, she stated, is already busy at lunchtime.

"We pretty much have a good lunch going on and our customers that come in all the time, they are not really the liquor people, so we plan on doing it after 2 o'clock," Berkachi said.

Board members approved the request in a unanimous vote.

"Thank you, Annie," said City Clerk Nicole Crispo, the board's chairperson. "Good luck."

In other business on July 20, the board:

Granted the request of the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., for an extension of premises of their all alcohol liquor license on Aug. 14 from noon to 8 p.m. for the organization's annual cookout. Marie Lumaghini said between 40 and 60 people are expected to attend the event.

Morrisette Bows From State Legion Baseball Tourney

By TOM JOYCE

The Morrisette Post 294 (Quincy) senior legion baseball team faced a major challenge on Sunday afternoon.

The team went up against South Attleboro Post 312 in the second round of the Massachusetts State Legion Baseball Tournament on Sunday, July 25 at Adams Field in Quincy. While Morrisette was able to string together a couple of runs at the plate, South Attleboro excelled early on in the contest offensively. Morrisette ended up losing the game 8-2, bringing its season to a close.

In the top of the first inning, Morrisette had some offensive success, but it didn't translate to any runs. Morrisette had a pair of runners reach base. Dylan Green got a base hit for the team and Liam Hines drew a walk. That put runners on first and second with two outs, but South Attleboro

Then it was South Attleboro's turn at the plate, and it put up three runs in the bottom of the first inning, two on base hits and the other on a sacrifice. The first run came on an RBI single. South Attleboro doubled its lead with a sacrifice fly later

Claire Roll Named Head Softball Coach At ENC

Eastern Nazarene College Director of Athletics Dr. Brad Zarges announces the hiring of Claire Roll as head softball coach. Roll becomes the 14th head coach in the program's 41-year history.

"We are very excited to welcome Coach Claire Roll to the Eastern Nazarene College family. From the very beginning of the process, it was clear that Coach Roll's experiences make her the ideal fit to lead a championship level program," Zarges said. "As a player and coach, she has demonstrated excellence in every role she has filled. In particular, Coach Roll brings a desire to use softball as a platform to empower the women on the team and to share the love of Christ. The future of ENC Softball is in good hands as Coach Roll continues to build on the championship foundation that is in place."

"I am incredibly excited to be given the opportunity to join ENC's coaching staff as the head coach of the Softball team. It is an honor to work with such a successful and passionate team of athletes," Roll said. "As a coach, I strive to be an avid listener, an effective communicator, and a life-long student of the game. Coaches are teachers and mentors of so much more than the rules and mechanics of their sport. My goal for this year, and in the future, is to come beside each one of my student-athletes, to honor the hard work that they have put in, and to share my passion for the game. We will push forward as a team and require of ourselves a renewed sense of excellence. This symbiotic structure of accountability and care, existing within the larger framework of rigorous academic study at ENC, has the potential to create substantial change in each student-athlete's life — to help her develop life-long skills that will serve her pursuits of excellence on and off the field."

Roll has served as head coach of the 18U Rage Softball travel team based out of Salisbury, Massachusetts since 2017 and guided the squad to a 28-3 record in 2020. Prior to joining Rage, she served as an assistant coach with the Blazers 18U Showcase travel team.

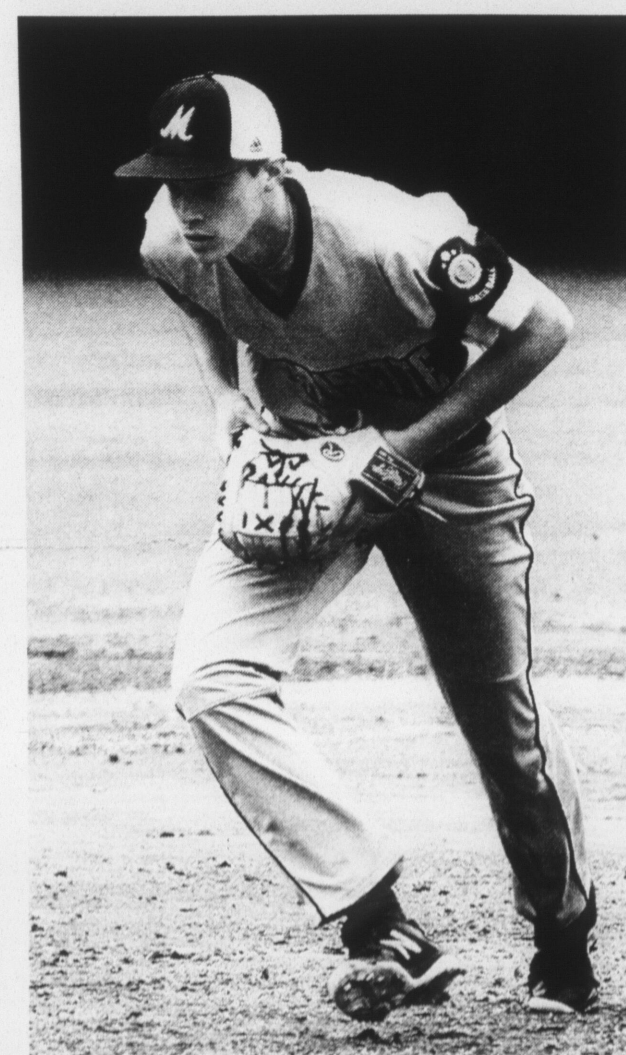

A 2012 graduate of Gordon College, Roll returned to her alma mater to join the Fighting Scots' coaching staff as an assistant coach for two seasons and helped lead the program to a pair of Commonwealth Coast Conference Tournament appearances.

Roll played three seasons at Gordon after transferring from Alfred University and holds numerous program records.

She graduated from Gordon in 2012 with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Sculpture before earning a Post-Baccalaureate Certificate from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts at Tufts in 2013 and a Master of Fine Arts degree in Sculpture from Boston University in 2016.

Roll has worked as an Assistant Professor of Art at Gordon as well as an Adjunct Professor at Bunker Hill Community College and an Instructor at Boston University.

in the inning, and an RBI double made it a 3-0 game.

South Attleboro had a clean inning on the mound in the top of the second inning, and the team added two more runs offensively in the bottom of the second inning. One of those runs came on an extra-base hit, an RBI double to make it a 4-0 ballgame.

South Attleboro also scored two runs in the bottom of the third and fourth innings, extending its lead to 8-0. However, it was the runs that the team scored in the first two innings of the game that put the team over the top in this one.

Morrisette went on to score a couple of runs later in the game. The team's final run came in the top of the seventh inning, but it didn't score enough runs to overcome the seven-run deficit that it had to start the inning. Ryan Beardsley knocked in an RBI single to make it an 8-2 ballgame, which was also the final score in this one.

Morrisette also scored on a bases-loaded walk in the top of the sixth inning that made it 8-1, but South Attleboro escaped the inning without allowing Morrisette to do any more damage at the plate.

The reason why Morrisette served as the away team and South Attleboro was the home team despite the game taking place at Adams Field – where Morrisette plays its home games – is because the field served as a host site for the Massachusetts State Legion Baseball Tournament. There were several games to take place at the field on Sunday, and they were mostly neutral site games.

Other teams that played games at Adams Field in Quincy on Sunday included Milton, Westfield, Bridgewater, Leominster, Beverly, and Natick.

As a result of there being multiple games at the venue on the same day, the game also started later than it was initially scheduled. While it was set to be a 1 p.m. game, a rain delay in the game before it and other games running more than two hours pushed the start time back. The game got started after 3 p.m.

It was the second straight day that Morrisette played what was technically a neutral site game at its home field as a part of the tournament. The previous day, Morrisette played a competitive first-round game against Natick Post 107 but lost that one 3-2 as its opponent put up the go-ahead run in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Morrisette Battles But Nipped By Natick, 3-2

By TOM JOYCE

Both sides competed hard, but the game didn't go Morrisette's way.

The Morrisette Post 294 senior legion baseball team (Quincy) competed against Natick Post 107 in the Massachusetts State Legion Baseball tournament at Adams Field in Quincy on Saturday, July 24. In a low-scoring affair, both sides got good performances out of their pitchers.

Ultimately, however, an error late in the game made the difference, and Natick ended up winning the game 3-2. The difference in the game came in the bottom of the sixth inning because, despite the game being in Quincy, Natick technically served as the home team. At that point, the game was tied at two apiece.

That wouldn't be the case for long, however. Natick had a pair of runners reach base earlier in the inning but with two outs, they got yet another base runner. It came on an error and scored a run, giving them a 3-2 advantage. Morrisette wasn't able to get anything going offensively in their last at-bats of the game and took the loss.

The game wasn't tied for long. Natick led for much of it, but the Morrisette offense showed some life in the top of the sixth inning. Before that, Natick led 2-0. Morrisette had three hits in the top of the sixth and got two runs out of it. Quinn Perry started things off right for Morrisette, hitting a single with one out in the inning. Then, Devin Desmond, the team's leadoff hitter in the game, knocked him in with an RBI triple to make it a 2-1 game – Morrisette's first run of the game. Ryan Beardsley then singled to score Desmond, making it a tie ballgame headed into the bottom of the sixth inning.

Early on in, neither team could get much going at the plate. Natick had an opportunity in the bottom of the second inning, but they weren't able to capitalize. Natick led off the bottom of the second inning with a double and ended up loading the bases with one out in the inning. However, Jack Nelson, the starting pitcher for Morrisette, was able to escape the inning unscathed, recording two outs without the runner from third base advancing to home.

Coleman Ross reached base for Morrisette with one out in the top of the third, but Natick would end up being the first team to score in that inning. They had an RBI single with two outs in the inning with runners on first and third.

Morrisette couldn't get anything going offensively in the top of the fourth inning, but Natick capitalized on another opportunity and was able to double their lead. They started things off with a leadoff single but this time, it wasn't a base hit that got them a run. It was a wild pitch. With two outs in the inning, Natick had runners on second and third. The wild pitch scored the runner from third base, but Morrisette managed to get out of the inning without letting the other runner in scoring position cross home plate.

First baseman Kevin Pritchard led off the fifth inning with a single for Morrisette, but Natick got out of that inning without letting up a run. It wouldn't be until the next inning that Morrisette scored their only runs of the game.

Natick served as the home team in the game because the game taking place at Adams Field wasn't because Morrisette was playing in the game. It happened because Adams Field is a host site in the statewide legion baseball tournament. Teams from Leominster, Milton, Bridgewater, Westfield, Attleboro, and Beverly also played games there on the same day.

Following the loss to Natick, Morrisette went on to play South Attleboro Post 312 the following day, also at Adams Field.

The roster for Morrisette this season includes: infielder Ryan Beardsley (Archbishop Williams), pitcher Kyle DeBoer (North Quincy), outfielder Devin Desmond (Quincy), catcher Max Gaudiano (Central Middle School), pitcher Declan Geary (pitcher), infielder Dylan Green (Quincy), outfielder/pitcher Liam Hines (North Quincy), outfielder/pitcher James Hooley (North Quincy), catcher Cormac Joyce (BC High), outfielder/pitcher Greg Mayo (Archbishop Williams), infielder Jackson Murphy (North Quincy), pitcher Jack Nelson (Quincy), outfielder Quinn Perry (BC High), first baseman Kevin Pritchard (North Quincy), infielder Will Roche (BC High), catcher/first baseman Coleman Ross (Quincy), pitcher Jake Rowell (Archbishop Williams), and infielder Gavin Toland (Thayer Academy).

DOVE Receives $10,000 Grant To Support Domestic Violence Prevention, Education Services

The Rockland Trust-Blue Hills Charitable Foundation awarded $10,000 to DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) Inc. to support its preventative and responsive services for individuals impacted by domestic and partner violence in Norfolk County. DOVE mitigates the impact of domestic violence by empowering survivors to make safe, well-informed decisions for themselves and their children, and to take supported steps toward healing and self-sufficiency. Since the start of the COVID-19 pandemic, DOVE has experienced a surge in requests for services which has continued as state and local restrictions lift.

"We are honored to support DOVE and its mission to provide safety, hope, and recovery for domestic violence survivors in local communities," said Edward H. Seksay, President and Chair of the Rockland Trust-Blue Hills Charitable Foundation. "DOVE's education and prevention services are critical to stopping domestic violence before it occurs. We are proud to partner with them to create space for healing and advocacy."

DOVE believes everyone has the right to live without fear of abuse and supports 9,000 community members annually. The organization's work began in 1978 when it opened as the first domestic violence shelter and hotline on the South Shore. It maintains three broad program models within its organizational structure: a residential 18-bed emergency shelter for supportive refuge; community-based services for crisis prevention, safety planning, and legal advocacy; and community education including YouthSpeak, a healthy relationship education and abuse prevention program for teens, and trainings for law enforcement, health care professionals, schools, businesses, social service providers, and religious organizations to raise awareness and prevent domestic violence.

"The numbers of victims reaching out for DOVE's help over the past 16 months, deeply punctuated by the impacts of the public health pandemic, have increased significantly, and those who connect with us are in situations of much greater danger," said Sue Chandler, Executive Director at DOVE Inc. "This critical support from Rockland Trust helps to ensure DOVE is able to respond and work with victims and survivors to achieve greater safety and stability. We are deeply grateful for this support."

Domestic violence is the leading cause of injury to women 15 to 44 years of age (CDC), and nearly one in three women in Massachusetts have experienced rape, physical violence, and/or stalking by an intimate partner (National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey, 2010). To counter these staggering statistics, DOVE offers numerous ways to engage with the organization. Dorchester Man Killed In Squantum Motorcycle Crash

By SCOTT JACKSON

An early morning motorcycle crash Saturday in Squantum claimed the life of a 23-year-old Dorchester man.

Quincy police responded to the scene of the crash shortly after 2 a.m. on Saturday, Capt. John Dougan said, and found the rider and motorcycle up against a seawall.

The rider, identified as Carlos Soto-Mendez, age 23, of Dorchester, was taken to Boston Medical Center with critical injuries. He was pronounced deceased there that morning, according to Sgt. Karyn Barkas.

A preliminary investigation by Quincy police indicated Soto-Mendez lost control of the motorcycle and crashed into the seawall, Dougan said.

The crash remained under investigation by the department's accident reconstruction unit as of Tuesday, Barkas stated.

Quincy Man Facing Charges After Multi-Car Crash

By SCOTT JACKSON

A 26-year-old Quincy man is facing charges after allegedly fleeing the scene of a multiple-vehicle crash in Wollaston early Sunday morning.

The crash took place near the intersection of Hancock and Beale Streets around 12:15 a.m. on Sunday, according to Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan.

Dougan said a vehicle was traveling southbound when it veered into the northbound lane, striking another vehicle head-on.

The driver of the vehicle that was struck was unconscious when first responders arrived, Dougan said, and Quincy firefighters had to remove him from the vehicle using hydraulic tools. The driver was taken to Boston Medical Center in serious condition.

A third vehicle was also involved in the crash, Dougan said. The driver of that vehicle was treated at the scene and was not hospitalized.

The driver of the vehicle that veered into the northbound lane fled the scene on foot but was located by officers at a nearby convenience store, Dougan said. He was taken to Boston Medical Center for evaluation.

Dougan said that driver — identified as 26-year-old Anthony McShane of Quincy — would be summonsed to court on charges of leaving the scene of a crash with property damage, leaving the scene of a crash that caused personal injury, and a marked lanes violation.

The police investigation into the crash remained open as of Tuesday morning, said Sgt. Karyn Barkas.

AAA: 'Miles-to-Empty' Warning Fuels When Drivers Decide To Fill Up

If you run your car on fumes before gassing up, you might want to re-think your driving habits.

Your vehicle's fuel-economy display, which tells you the number of miles you can go before running out of gas, might not be as accurate as you think, says AAA.

AAA research reports "Miles-to-Empty" warning system estimates vary significantly among vehicles. But more important, those estimates depend upon individual driving habits such as speed, acceleration, and driving distance.

"Most drivers want to squeeze every drop of gas from their tank, especially when prices rise," said Mary Maguire, AAA Northeast Director of Public and Government Affairs. "But by over-relying on these in-car displays, you might be taking unnecessary risks."

Filling up when your tank is nearing empty can tax your fuel pump and cause other mechanical problems, said Maguire.

In fact, nearly 75% of drivers use their "Miles-to-Empty" display to tell them when they need to fill up, an action AAA doesn't recommend, a previous AAA consumer survey reported.

With the Automobile Club of Southern California's Automotive Research Center, AAA tested several vehicles in simulated driving scenarios to determine the accuracy of fuel-economy systems and "Miles-to-Empty" warning systems.

Here's what was found:

- Real-world fuel-economy displays showed low error margins compared to simulated tests. However, errors varied significantly from vehicle to vehicle, depending upon speed, acceleration, driving conditions, driving style and distance.

- The accuracy of the "Miles-to-Empty" tests also varied among different driving scenarios, such as highway driving, city driving and idling.

Both vehicle systems are important tools in understanding how different driving styles affect fuel efficiency, said Ms. Maguire. "These systems can give drivers clearer pictures on ways specific driving habits influence their fuel economy," she added. "But relying on them solely to determine when to fill up can very well lead to internal engine damage."

To maximize fuel efficiency, AAA recommends drivers:

- Maintain at least a quarter tank of gas to prevent fuel pump damage that can occur when a gas tank is regularly run down to empty.

- Reset the vehicle's trip mileage systems after each fill-up to see how fuel economy changes as driving conditions change.

- Avoid hard acceleration; properly inflate tires to recommended pressure.

- Minimize loads and use of roof racks to lessen drag.

- Consider reducing air conditioning use.

- Run multiple errands in one trip, and, whenever possible, avoid times when traffic is at its heaviest.

QEA Eager To Resolve Fair Contract To Avoid Looming Crisis In City Schools

There is no doubt that the educators of Quincy Public Schools rose to the challenge this last school year. We worked through the pandemic, completely reinventing how we taught our students multiple times. Despite a short turn-around time to learn and implement new technologies and ways of presenting curriculum, QPS educators gave our all to effectively educate our students, pivoted at every new directive, taught via Google Meet, Zoom and other never-before-used mediums.

We also risked our own health to work in-person with the students of QPS in school buildings while state education officials worked from home.

We did this all with an expired contract.

Now that Quincy is seemingly emerging from this crisis, it is critical that QPS avoids another preventable crisis by settling a fair contract with Quincy educators.

During the pandemic, many Quincy politicians and district administrators praised the hard work and sacrifices made by educators. Unfortunately, their actions have yet to match their political rhetoric.

Those same politicians who praised educators for their sacrifices during the pandemic are refusing to offer any salary increase for the 2020-2021 year, despite having millions in federal relief funds that can be used for this purpose.

The Mayor and the School Committee are not being straight with the public about what is required to maintain the quality of our schools. The city's history of bad labor relations, combined with the lack of a fair contract that will allow our schools to attract and retain quality educators, could create an unnecessary crisis in our schools.

Apparently, our elected leaders have made the political decision to reduce the quality of our children's public education by eroding the earning power of educators, despite the availability of federal relief funds.

Tragically, the progress we have all worked so hard to achieve in improving public education in recent years is in severe jeopardy because of this avoidable contract crisis.

Let's prevent that from happening.

The Quincy Education Association looks forward to working with QPS administrators to avoid this looming crisis in our schools. We are eager to resolve a fair contract that will continue to provide students with the educators needed to provide a high-quality education. We are unwilling to sacrifice the quality of our children's education in the process.

Speakman Recognized With MOVA Award

Liz Speakman, a candidate for Quincy School Committee, was recently recognized by the Massachusetts Office for Victim Assistance (MOVA) for her contributions to advancing victim rights and services with the 2020 Innovation Award.

The award recognizes individuals who have developed an innovative program or policy that helps crime victims. Currently running for school committee in Quincy, Speakman also serves as the Domestic and Gender-Based Violence Prevention Initiative Coordinator for the City of Cambridge. She works with multiple stakeholders to ensure comprehensive prevention and intervention efforts around gender-based violence and was previously the director for Haven, at Mass General Hospital. In both roles, Speakman has been the primary force in the development and implementation of an innovative and unique trauma informed approach to her work.

Speakman, who has devoted 20 years to ending gender-based violence, says she has had a tremendous impact in the Boston-area. She said she understands the importance of a collaborative community response to gender-based violence and has worked thoughtfully and strategically to build partnerships and collaborations with many local organizations, city departments, and community groups.

Speakman has worked closely with the Cambridge Public Health Department and the Cambridge Police Department to transform how the police and other agencies handle investigations and support survivors and has helped make Cambridge a model for domestic violence prevention and intervention.

"Without the community partners I've been privileged to work alongside, without their commitment and trust, I would not have been able to advance the work of the Initiative," Speakman said, "I'm grateful to everyone for their faith in me and for the hard work they were willing to put in as well. This MOVA award is a recognition of us."

To know Mr. Huke was to respect and admire him. He was an honorable man who loved and cared for his family, community, and country. He led a life of service to others.

Mr. Huke was born in Boston and raised in Quincy, the son of the late H. Robert Huke Jr and Shirley M. Huke.

He was a life member of the First Baptist Church of Wollaston. He earned the rank of Eagle Scout with Troop 19. He graduated from North Quincy High School in 1965 and received a BA in history and secondary education from Eastern Nazarene College in 1969.

In June of 1969 he married Janet M. Evans.

Rob and Jan knew each other practically their entire lives. A picture of Rob's mother and Jan's mother, Christine, holding their infant children outside of church once existed.

Together, they attended church, graduated from high school, married, had four children, and moved 12 times before settling in Hanson. Most importantly, they built a beautiful and loving life together.

Mr. Huke volunteered for the Army and graduated from Officer Candidate School in 1970. He served 28 years in the Army, retir-

He was the first Army officer to attend the Legal Officer Course, U.S. Naval Justice School, Newport, RI.

While in the Army, Mr. Huke earned an MS in contract and acquisition management from Florida Institute of Technology.

After retiring from the military, Mr. Huke worked in the private sector for a defense contractor. In 2005, he joined two Army colleagues to form The Task Force, Inc., providing management, acquisition support, and consulting to firms doing business with the federal government.

An active Freemason, Mr. Huke was master, or presiding officer, of Wollaston (now Rural) Lodge in 1996 and 2002. He was particularly active in the Scottish Rite Boston-Lafayette Lodge of Perfection, serving as the presiding officer from 2012-2014. For his contributions he received the honorary 33° in 2013. That same year he was designated grand representative to the Prince Hall Grand Lodge

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A misunderstanding tests the temperament of the sometimes-headstrong Aries. Instead of blowing your top, take time for a pleasant diversion while things cool down.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A workplace problem could make the divine Bovine see red. But talk it out before you consider walking out. Some surprising facts emerge that change your earlier focus.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You face a choice between ignoring your uneasy feelings about your relationship with that special person and demanding explanations. A close friend offers wise counsel.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change you'd been hoping for carries an unexpected complication. Stay the course, and things will work themselves out. Be sure to make time for family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Aspects favor spending time with loved ones. On the job, new ideas are generally welcomed. But some demands for changes could cause problems. Be ready to defend your choices.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: That workplace problem is close to being resolved with results that should please everyone. Take time off to indulge your love of fun and games.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Most of the time you are the most unflappable person around. But be ready to be thrown off-balance in the nicest way when Cupid takes aim in your direction.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's not often when someone tries to "sting" the sharp-witted Scorpion. But it can happen. Continue to be skeptical about anything that seems too good to be true.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your strong sense of self-esteem helps you serve as a role model for someone who needs personal reassurances. Your efforts pay off in an unexpected way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close considers revealing a painful secret. Withhold judgment. Instead, open your generous heart, and offer dollops of your love and understanding.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your talents as a peacemaker are called upon once more as an old problem re-emerges with new complications. Move cautiously in order to avoid falling into hidden traps.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your artistic side is enhanced with the reception given to your new project. Use this success as encouragement toward fulfilling your larger goals.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your natural sense of leadership is combined with a deep sense of responsibility. People trust you to give them both guidance and understanding.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD — James Franco's reputation for working tirelessly on many projects was well-known. But that all halted in 2017, when two female students, in an acting class he taught, accused him of coercing them to perform explicit sex scenes on camera. A court awarded them and class-action members who filed against Franco $2,235,000. The two actresses divided $1,341,000, and a fund was started for the other class-action members. While Franco paid, he hasn't formally admitted that anything inappropriate happened. "The Long Home," produced, directed and starring Franco, with Josh Hutcherson, Timothy Hutton, Courtney Love, Ashton Kutcher and Josh Harnett, has sat in limbo since 2017, presumably waiting for this verdict. Now Great Point Media, which owns the rights to the film, is desperately looking for a distributor.

Matt Damon has been quietly stacking films for release to theaters. The first, the crime-drama "Stillwater," with Abigail Breslin, arrives July 30; "The Last Duel," produced and directed by Ridley Scott, and written by Damon with Ben Affleck and Nicole Holofcener, stars Damon and Jodie Comer and is set for Oct. 25. He's currently working with Chris Hemsworth, Natalie Portman, Christian Bale and Chris Pratt in "Thor: Love and Thunder." Damon also is executive producer of "Green Beret's Guide to Surviving the Apocalypse," which he's wanted to do since volunteering in Haiti in 2009.

Now that patrons are returning to theaters, they'll be watching three top actresses from yesterday, today and tomorrow: Two-time Oscar winner Jane Fonda (for "Klute," 1971, and "Coming Home," 1978), at 83, is not slowing down. She's working with Lily Tomlin on the long-delayed seventh season of "Grace and Frankie" (shut down by the pandemic in January) and lending her voice with Whoopi Goldberg for the Apple TV 3D computer-animated comedy "Luck."

Two-time Oscar winner Cate Blanchett ("The Aviator," 2004, and "Blue Jasmine," 2014) is awaiting the release of director Guillermo del Toro's "Nightmare Alley," co-starring Bradley Cooper and Willem Dafoe, due Dec. 3, and the Netflix black-comedy "Don't Look Up," with Jennifer Lawrence, Leonardo DiCaprio, Meryl Streep and Timothee Chalamet. She's just wrapped the sci-fi comedy "Borderlands," with Kevin Hart, Jamie Lee Curtis and Jack Black, for Lionsgate.

And rising fast is Karen Gillan, who was Amy Pond in the "Doctor Who" series (2008 and 2010-2013). Fans know the 33-year-old native of Inverness, Scotland, as "Nebula" in "The Guardians of the Universe" franchise, "Jumanji: Welcome to the Jungle" (and its sequel), with Dwayne Johnson, Kevin Hart, Jack Black and Nick Jonas, and she gets top billing in the Judd Apatow Netflix comedy "The Bubble," above David Duchovny, Leslie Mann and Fred Armisen. To think it only took her 12 years to become an overnight sensation!

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Terrestrial Globe — Home schooling and extra time spent with family because of coronavirus health rules has created a demand for maps, globes and more information about other countries. It is not difficult to figure out the probable age of a globe. The older the globe, the higher the price might be. The first terrestrial globe known to historians was probably made in 1492, a globe showing what the land mass looked like on a sphere. It was created in Germany.

A terrestrial globe you might buy today at a flea market or house sale is probably less than 100 years old. Look for the name of the manufacturer. You can research when the company made globes. Early makers are listed online and in schoolbooks. You can note the country names on a globe and make a list to guide your search for a date. There have been many name changes and they overlap in time, so a list helps. Russia became the Soviet Union in 1922. There is a song that reminds us, "Now it's Istanbul not Constantinople," dating the change in 1930. And Persia became Iran in 1935. Siam changed its name to Thailand in 1939. There have been many more changes, but these should help spot a globe made before the 1930s. Israel was created in 1948. The Gold Coast became Ghana in 1957. Ceylon became Sri Lanka in 1972. Czechoslovakia split into two countries in 1993 and a new map or globe now calls them the Czech Republic and Slovakia. The first celestial globes showing the positions of stars were created in the second century, and they are also made today. Probably the most expensive new globe available is one sold by Hammacher Schlemmer for $14,000. A new school globe can sell for as little as $70.

Q: I inherited my dad's medical schoolbooks from the 1940s and '50s. They're all in very good condition. I've tried selling them online with no takers, and bookstores in the area won't take them. Is there a place where I can sell them, maybe at an antique or vintage bookstore?

A: Textbooks that aren't current don't sell well. A medical textbook from the mid-1800s or earlier might have some historic value, especially if it has advertisements in it. An 1865 edition of "Gray's Anatomy" sold at auction last year for $168.

Strange BUT TRUE

• Prior to becoming America's 38th president, Gerald Ford had a side gig as a model. In 1942, shortly after joining the Navy, he landed an uncredited spot on the cover of Cosmopolitan in his uniform.

• Scotland has 421 words for snow.

• Coca-Cola can remove blood stains. Pour a whole can into your wash, along with the blood-stained clothing and your usual detergent, then run a normal cycle. The laundry will come out stain-free.

• "Albert Einstein" is an anagram for "ten elite brains." Hmm, seems fitting to us.

• Sales data gathered by the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council indicates a strong link between the number of hot dogs and sausages sold at Major League Baseball stadiums and their team's ability to win games.

• Your nose is always visible to you, but your brain ignores it through a process called Unconscious Selective Attention.

• "Prison Inside Me" is a hotel of sorts in South Korea where people pay to be locked away in solitary confinement for 24 hours. "Jail mates" wear matching uniforms, sleep on the floor in 54-square-foot cells and are forbidden to speak to each other. Meals are minimal — a steamed sweet potato and banana shake for dinner and rice porridge for breakfast. Like any good getaway, the prison stay comes with a souvenir: a certificate of parole upon completing one's stint in solitary confinement!

• Who says there's no such thing as truth in advertising? Nebraska's recent advertising campaign slogan, complete with T-shirts and coffee mugs, was "Nebraska: Honestly, it's not for everyone."

• Tickling has been divided into two types. Knismesis refers to "light featherlike" tickling, and gargalesis refers to "harder laughter-inducing" tickling.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

• If you've lost a zipper pull, you can create a temporary one with a paperclip.

• Remove all of the air from a plastic storage bag with a drinking straw. Slip the straw into the bag and close as much as possible. Then suck any air out through the straw, and quickly pull out and close in a single motion. Your leftovers will stay fresh longer, and foods may stack better in the freezer.

• And speaking of straws, did you know you can use them to curl your hair? Wind sections of damp hair around a plastic straw and secure the ends with a bobby pin. Dry in the sun or use a hair dryer on low heat. Remove and spritz with hair spray.

• Here's an oldie but a goodie! Iced coffee is at its best when brewed with twice the usual amount of ground coffee, because the coffee is diluted by the melting ice cubes. Or use regular-strength brewed ice coffee and serve over coffee ice cubes. They're easy to prepare: Pour cool brewed coffee into ice-cube trays and freeze.

• Lemon juice can bring out the flavor of mushrooms. I keep a little spray bottle to keep lemon juice accessible in the kitchen. I find it's good for all kinds of things, like avocados and apples. I spray the cut side to keep them from browning. It's also great for salad greens. — T.T. in New Jersey

• Make your own camping lamp: Strap a headlamp to a full gallon jug of water. It fills the tent with a soft light, and you can still drink the water!

Q: I've always been fascinated with the "Lost City of Atlantis." Wasn't there a TV show back in the 1960s about it? My daughter thinks I'm remembering the show for kids with the frog people and dinosaurs, but I've assured her that's not it! — H.B.

A: This question is bringing back such great childhood memories. The Sleestaks were big-eyed humanoids featured in "Land of the Lost," a Saturday morning children's show produced by Sid and Marty Krofft. It debuted in 1974 and starred Wesley Eure, Kathy Coleman (the blond girl with Cindy Brady pigtailed) and Spencer Milligan.

Tell your daughter that the show you fondly remember is "Man From Atlantis." It ran from 1977-78 and starred Patrick Duffy (who later played Bobby Ewing on "Dallas") as the shirtless sole survivor of that legendary lost island.

You might be interested in a new documentary that just premiered on the Discovery Channel. "Hunting Atlantis," with expert Stel Pavlou and volcanologist Jess Phoenix, takes you on a journey across the world testing the theory that the Lost City of Atlantis is not as ancient as once believed. Their fascinating exploits take them to the Black Sea, a mysterious Greek island and unexplored archeological sites along Croatia.

Q: When will the new season of "The Witcher" be on Netflix? I'm assuming there's going to be a second season since it was so darn good. — T.A.

A: You're in luck — the sophomore season of "The Witcher," starring Henry Cavill and his long blond tresses, will premiere Dec. 21. Just as in the first, the second installment will feature just eight episodes about monster hunter Geralt of Rivia (Cavill), sorceress Yennefer (Anya Chalotra) and princess Ciri (Freya Allan). The plot will be based mostly on the third novel in The Witcher Saga titled "Blood of Elves," by author Andrzej Sapkowski. "The Witcher" isn't just limited to one series. There's a popular video game series, an upcoming anime feature film, a prequel series and the global virtual celebration called WitcherCon (visit Witcher-Con.com).

Q: Whatever happened to the much-younger woman that Jerry Seinfeld dated at the height of his sitcom fame? I forgot her name, but I believe she designed swimsuits? — R.R.

A: In the early 1990s, 38-year-old comedian Jerry Seinfeld met 17-year-old Shoshanna Lonstein (now Shoshanna Gruss) in Central

Henry Cavill in "The Witcher"

Park. They reportedly were just friends until Shoshanna turned 18 soon after. She says they eventually broke up because she was homesick and tired of being a tabloid target. In 1998, she debuted her fashion line with a focus on dresses and later added swimwear to her collection. She's been extremely successful ever since. You can see for yourself at Shoshanna.com, which includes a list of stores that carry her womenswear.

As for her personal life, Shoshanna is now 46 and has three children with her ex-spouse, Joshua Gruss. Jerry, who has been married to his wife, Jessica, since 1999, also has three children.

Grieving Cats Unite After Losing Brothers

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I wanted to share a tale of two cats. One is "Bean," a chocolate Burmese. Bean had a brother, "Coco." I purchased the two of them when they were kittens. Sadly, Coco passed away at age 3 from cancer. Bean grieved for a very long time.

A few months ago, I met someone in an online group who also had two Burmese cats, and one of them passed away. The surviving cat, "Storm," was inconsolable. Like Bean, she roamed her house day and night, meowing for her brother to reappear.

Storm's owner had health issues and was looking to place her in a new home. I had a feeling that together we could help both of these grieving cats. But cats, especially adult cats, often do not get along - especially when one is introduced into the other's home. However, both cats were fixed, which helps reduce territorialism and aggression, among other problems. We both agreed to a two-week trial; if the cats were too stressed out or fought, then it was a no-go.

Fortunately, after a cautious sniffing-out period during their introduction, Bean and Storm snuggled right up together. They have been buddies ever since. Neither of them goes meowing around at night. Bean and Storm are a new family, and they couldn't be happier. Thought I would share! - Dana A., via email

DEAR DANA: Thank you for a heartwarming story! You did the right thing by setting up a trial period, because cats that don't like each other may escalate aggression with each encounter, and the trauma is bad for both. But it sounds like Bean and Storm have settled in nicely. Congratulations!

COUCH THEATER

BY RACHEL ROSE

Dragging the Classics: The Brady Bunch — When producers randomly pull actor names and potential situations out of a hat and mash them together, here is the result. Three original cast members of the classic 1970s sitcom teamed up with drag queens from "RuPaul's Drag Race" to precisely re-create a "Brady Bunch" episode. Yes, it's corny. Yes, the actors are long in the tooth to be playing teenagers, and their acting is a little stiff. But for lifelong "Bunch" fans, this is guilty pleasure. Costumes are accurate, set design is perfect, and drag queens Kylie Sonique Love and Kandy Muse provide hilarious yet sincere perspectives to playing Jan and Cindy Brady. (Paramount+)

The Artist (PG-13) — New this week to Hulu's current offerings is the 2012 Academy Award-winner for Best Picture. Starring Jean Dujardin and Bérénice Bejo, this French comedy-drama is a tribute to the magic of the silent-film era of Hollywood. Set from 1927-1932, the plot revolves around an older silent-film star who has a chance meeting with an up-and-coming starlet whose career he then helps propel. Filmed in black-and-white, and largely silent except for the musical score, "The Artist" also won Oscars for costume design and original score. It is a throwback to an almost forgotten style of movie, and a welcome change from the modern. (Hulu)

Fresh Fried and Crispy — Food critic Daym Drops visits eight cities across the U.S. to highlight unique and decadent fried foods. Focusing less on the recipes and more on the final dishes, the show uses a lot of slow-motion effects and up-close camera angles to draw out the indulgence of that first incredible bite. It's so visually enticing, you'll find yourself desperately craving a mile-high Maryland blue crab sandwich or a San Diego-style cast iron-fried ribeye steak. (Netflix)

Jolt (R) — There's something very satisfying about watching a female character with a rage "problem" act on her impulses against overbearing and generally annoying men. In "Jolt," Kate Beckinsale stars as Lindy, a bouncer with a neurological affliction that affects her impulse control. Self-administered electric shocks help to maintain her temper, until tragedy hits. When her love interest is murdered, Lindy is the prime suspect and must deal with the detectives trying to nail her for the crime (Bobby Cannavale and Laverne Cox), while simultaneously hunting for the real killer. An Amazon Studios original, the cast is rounded out with Susan Sarandon and the man who makes every movie better, Stanley Tucci. (Prime Video)

Kandy Muse as Cindy Brady

Critter Country Vets (Season 2) — The popularity of animal-focused shows continues in this docuseries based in rural Georgia. Friends since childhood, Dr. Terrence Ferguson and Dr. Bernard Hodges own and operate two Critter Fixer vet clinics, whose motto is "We Treat 'Em All." So don't expect the usual cat-fight injuries or dogs that ate the car keys. These docs tend to everything from an alligator with a lung infection to a lethargic chinchilla, without ever losing their sense of humor or love for the job. (Disney+)

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

A safety play is an effort by declarer to overcome a potentially unfavorable distribution of the defenders' cards. There are so many different kinds of safety plays that it is better to try to understand the principle behind them than to rely exclusively on memory or past experience.

Take this case where West leads the queen of clubs against three notrump.

by Steve Becker

and East plays the king. South has no choice but to take this trick with the ace because he can't run the risk of East shifting to a heart. This brings him to the critical play at trick two. If declarer makes the mistake of playing the king of diamonds at this point, expecting to score five diamond tricks, he goes down. As it happens, East has all four missing diamonds and now has a stopper in the suit. South still has a chance to make the contract if East has the ace of hearts, but, as the cards lie, the best he can do is finish with eight tricks. Before doing anything at trick two, declarer should first ask himself: "What can defeat me?" It shouldn't take him long to realize that the only threat to the contract is a 4-0 diamond division. His next step is to look for a way to deal with that division if it exists. Declarer notes that he cannot overcome the J-10-8-5 of diamonds in the West hand regardless of how he broaches the suit, but that he can overcome four diamonds in East's hand. Accordingly, he leads the three of diamonds to the ace at trick two, exposing the 4-0 break. He then returns a diamond toward his hand. No matter how East chooses to defend, his diamonds are neutralized, and South makes the contract.

Riddle answer: _____

Does Oatmeal Contain Roundup Herbicide?

DEAR DR. ROACH: Experts advised us to "throw out sugar-laden cereals" and eat a healthy breakfast, such as oatmeal. Now we are told that oatmeal contains a significant amount of glyphosate, which they say is an ingredient in Roundup! Are we poisoning our children?—A.D.

ANSWER: here have been traces of glyphosate (an herbicide) found in oatmeal and other cereals. However, as always, the dose makes the poison.

The Environmental Protection Agency has set a level of 30 parts per million, below which the exposure is considered safe. A 2018 study by the Environmental Working Group found levels of glyphosate in oatmeal breakfast cereals to be between 0.5 and 1 parts per million. It is unlikely that consumption of these cereals causes any significant health risks. Nobody likes the idea of eating an herbicide, but these are very low amounts, and some experts have questioned the specificity of the detection method used.

The same EWG report found that organic cereals had less, but often still some, glyphosate in them. Although the levels in both conventional and organic cereals were safe, glyphosate itself is found at generally lower levels in organic products. Unfortunately, there have not been good studies on residual amounts of organic pesticides (some of which are substantially more toxic than glyphosate) that might be found in organically grown food.

I agree with reducing the simple sugars found in many cereals, especially those marketed to children. However, I recommend more protein for breakfast than is found in oatmeal. You can add more with nuts, egg whites or seeds.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I was diagnosed with high LDL cholesterol 20 years ago. I have been taking higher statin doses and now take Crestor 20 mg. Due to muscle pain, my cardiologist prescribed Praluent injections of 75 mg every two weeks to lower my LDL to below 77. I am 74 and have two heart stents in my right coronary artery, but have never had a heart attack.

Praluent is a monoclonal antibody, and the literature states that it can lower your immunity. I also have low-grade (Gleason 3+3) prostate cancer that has been stable since diagnosed in 2012. Is there a risk that Praluent could cause my prostate cancer to advance?—J.E.

ANSWER: Although taking a statin (such as the Crestor you were taking to reduce cholesterol) was once thought to increase cancer risk, multiple studies have since found no convincing evidence that this is the case.

Praluent (alirocumab) is in a new class of drugs, called the PCSK-9 inhibitors. They have not been used for very long, but I found no evidence that these drugs increase cancer risk either. There was some concern that the increase in bile acids seen in people treated with these drugs might predispose them to colon cancer, but initial studies have not shown any problems so far with either Praluent or evolocumab (Repatha).

I believe that for you, heart disease is a larger risk to your life than your prostate cancer. Since you can't tolerate a statin, a PCSK-9 inhibitor is more likely to prolong your life by reducing heart disease risk than it is to shorten your life by increasing prostate cancer risk. There is no evidence that it does so.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu.

2. Paul McCartney, in 1976. He wrote the song in response to critics (as well as John Lennon) who claimed McCartney only wrote silly love songs. The song went to No. 1.

Suffrage Tea, Lecture At Eustis Estate Aug. 8

In honor of the fund-raising teas for women's suffrage at the turn of the century, the Eustis Estate welcomes fashion historian Raissa Bretaña to its own suffrage tea to speak on how fashion was a crucial part of this political movement Sunday, Aug. 8.

Dress played an important role in constructing the image of the American suffragist. Raissa examines how fashion shaped the practices of public activism, women's rights, and dress reform in America—from the drawing rooms of wealthy socialites to the streets of New York City and even the gates of the White House. These stylized modes of dress reflected the shifting ideals of American suffragists from the dawn of the new century to the pire at the end of the year have qualified for the ballot: Douglas Gutro of Arnold Street, Emily Lebo of Highland Avenue and Courtney Perdios of Ruggles Street.

Joining them on the ballot are challengers Tina Cahill of Grenwold Road, Ellen Patterson O'Donnell of Hatherly Road, Liberty Schaaf of Howe Street and Liz Speakman of Merry-mount Road.

An eighth candidate, John McDonald of Quincy Shore Drive, took out nomination papers but did not return them.

In the race for the three at-large seats on the City Council, Michael Bellotti, currently the Norfolk County treasurer and a Bayberry Road resident, took out nomination papers early Tuesday afternoon and returned them before the deadline to do so. His signatures were awaiting certification as The Sun went to press for the week.

Bellotti served six years in the state House of Representatives followed by 20 years as the sheriff of Norfolk County, a position he left in 2018 to become interim president of Quincy College. He led the municipally owned school for a year and was elected county treasurer last November.

Three other candidates already qualified for the ballot in the at-large race, incumbents Noel DiBona of Chickatabot Road and Anne Mahoney of Ferriter Street as well as challenger William Burke of Rice Road.

The third incumbent at-large councillor, Nina Liang of Grand View Avenue, returned her papers Tuesday afternoon and her signatures were awaiting certification.

A sixth candidate, John Rodophele of Grenwold Road, had pulled papers to run at-large but did not return them.

There will be at least one other contested council race in the fall, and there could be two additional ones as well.

In Ward 5, incumbent Charles Phelan Jr. of Fenno Street and challenger Stephen Christo of Standish Avenue both qualified for the ballot.

In Ward 1, incumbent David McCarthy of Whitney Road has qualified for the ballot. Challenger Joseph Murphy of Macy Street returned his papers and they were awaiting certification late Tuesday.

In Ward 2, incumbent Anthony Andronico of Endicott Street qualified for the ballot. Two other potential candidates — Steven Perdios of Ruggles Street and Jorgette Theophilis — returned their nomination papers and they were both awaiting certification.

A preliminary election would be held on Sept. 14 in the Ward 2 race if all three candidates qualify for the ballot.

The remaining incumbent councillors — Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain of Forbes Hill Road, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci of Cross Street and Ward 6 Councillor William Harris — qualified for the ballot and will be unopposed in the fall.

Candidates have until 5 p.m. on Aug. 10 to submit certified nomination papers, including a statement of candidacy, to the clerk's office. The deadline for objections and withdrawals is 5 p.m. on Aug. 12. Ballot position for the preliminary would be determined by drawing at 10 a.m. on Aug. 13.

The deadline to register to vote in the preliminary is 8 p.m. on Aug. 25. The last day to apply for a mail-in ballot ahead of the preliminary is Sept. 8 and the deadline to request an absentee ballot is noon on Sept. 13.

The cut off to register to vote ahead of the final election is 8 p.m. on Oct. 13. The deadline to request to vote by mail in the final election is Oct. 27 and the deadline to request an absentee ballot is noon on Nov. 1.
